DISAPPOINTED 'VULTURES'

Osteopath Dies Of Drug Poison; Note Is Revealed

LONDON (AP) — Dr. Stephen Ward's bizarre life ended Saturday and the playboy who started the Profumo scandal left a suicide note saying: "I'm sorry to disappoint the vultures."

Ward died in a flower-banked room of the St. Stephen's Hospital, where he was brought unconscious Wednesday morning suffering from a massive overdose of drugs.

The 50-year-old osteopath, artist and self-described "connoisseur of love making" swallowed pills some time during the previous night. His note said he had given up hope of acquittal on vice charges at the Old Bailey Court.

Next day the trial went into its final hours without him, and the jury convicted him as he had feared.

NEVER WOKE

He never regained consciousness to hear of the verdict, which could have brought him two prison terms of seven years each. Officials marked the sensational file closed with this notation: "Died, Aug. 3." Justice Archie Marshall never got a chance to pass sentence.

Ward was convicted of living off the earnings of the two most notorious call girls of the Profumo case: Christine Keeler, 21, and Marilyn (Mandy) Rice-Davies, 18.

He introduced the red-haired Miss Keeler to John D. Profumo, and Profumo had to resign as war minister in disgrace when the scandal came out.

Secluded at the home of a girl friend, Miss Keeler burst into tears when she heard of the death of the man she said held a strange influence over her life. She refused to talk to anyone.

It was Ward who pressed for a full examination of the Profumo case, fearful, as he said, that the gossip would ruin his reputation. To the last, he professed to believe he was the victim of political revenge for opening up a Pandora's box that shook the Conservative government of Prime Minister Harold Macmillan.

Bailey Resigns Alderman Post At Sterlington

O. K. Bailey, principal of Sterlington High School, has tendered his resignation as a member of the Sterlington Board of Aldermen to Gov. Jimmy Davis.

In a letter of resignation to the Louisiana Governor, Bailey said he felt he had accomplished his original mission as alderman, and in the capacity of an educator, did not wish to become further involved in local politics.

After announcing the resignation in his opening remarks, Bailey expressed appreciation to the governor, aldermen, mayor and Sterlington citizens "for the opportunity of helping to initiate local government in this community where I have lived for the past 34 years."

To close the letter Bailey described his reasons for acceptance and resignation of the post as:

"I accepted the original appointment to assist in bringing together two factions at odds over the town becoming incorporated. I feel that this mission has been accomplished. Every resolution that has been passed has been unanimous.

"I am, primarily, a professional educator and do not care to become involved in local politics, therefore, I feel that the best interests of all concerned will be served by my resignation. I am vitally interested in the problems of the community and I shall continue to work to make this a better community in which to live and rear a family, Bailey concluded."

CANOGA PARK, Calif. (AP)—Lyn Seely, 3, played with crayons and a coloring book Saturday using her left hand exclusively. Doctors said they haven't decided when they'll tell her that her right hand is gone.

But they said that Lyn, whose arm was clawed and bitten by a circus bear July 26, has started using her left hand without coaching. And she manages very well.

The youngster was attacked by a Himalayan bear when she reached through the bars of its cage at nearby Santa Susana. She thought it was a big dog and she wanted to pet it.

Mississippi Voting Nears On Governor

Four Political Veterans Facing The Supreme Test

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Four political veterans — all avowed segregationists and states rights-ers—will present their cases to the voters Tuesday in Mississippi's first Democratic primary for governor.

An estimated 450,000 voters will choose from a field made up of former Gov. J. P. Coleman, Lt. Gov. Paul Johnson, attorney Charles Sullivan and welder Robert Mason.

STATE ISSUES

After two years of intermittent racial troubles and integration suits, national politics overshadow such traditional topics as state finances, teacher pay, public welfare and liquor as the prime campaign issues.

All four candidates campaigned as Mississippi Democrats—a label used in this Deep South state to distinguish a states righter from the national party and its liberal views.

The big question submitted to the voters is which of the four is most opposed to the national administration, or which could most effectively block integration and civil rights movements in the state.

Voters will ballot on all state, county and legislative offices. Because of the long ballot, which must be counted by hand in every county but Adams (Natchez), prospects for an early decision is poor.

Some observers hope for a trend by midnight but most figured it will be Wednesday afternoon before anything definite develops.

Because Coleman, Johnson and Sullivan are regarded as major candidates all certain to draw good votes, a runoff between the two high men seems assured. The second primary will be Aug. 27 and the general election—more than a formality this year because of serious Republican opposition—will be Nov. 5.

The eventual winner will take office next January.

Most observers predict Coleman will lead the first primary, but opinions differ on whether his runoff opponent will be Johnson or Sullivan.

Gov. Ross Barnett, following tradition in this state where the governor, state auditor and state treasurer cannot succeed themselves, took no public part in the race.

Turning Point In Cold War Seen By Rusk; Talks Start

Child Is Killed By Bushhog

The 10-year-old daughter of Eugene Roswell died in the blades of a bushhog when she slipped off the tractor she was riding with her dad near their home in Sterlington Saturday afternon.

Debbie Roswell died immediately when she fell from the back of the tractor into the path of the bushhog at 3 p.m. Saturday. The tragedy occurred as Roswell was bushhoging the pasture at their home on Rogers Street in Sterlington.

The bushhog, a long-bladed machine for cutting down bushes and high grass, was coupled close behind the tractor. When the child fell, she fell right in the path and almost on top of the machine.

The youngster was the Roswell's only remaining child. Her 12-year-old brother, Chuck, was killed in a hunting accident in Sterlington last fall. Roswell was in a state of shock Saturday following the fatality.

Dr. John P. Burton, Ouachita Parish coroner, and investigating Ouachita parish deputies ruled the death accidental. Roswell stopped the tractor immediately when the child fell off, but the blades of the bushhog had already hit her.

Funeral arrangements are incomplete, but will be under the direction of Mulhearn Funeral Home in Monroe. The remains were carried to the funeral home Saturday.

Survivors include her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Roswell, Sterlington; maternal grandparents, Mrs. C. E. Barklow, Monroe, and A. L. Bandy, Houston, Tex.; and paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Roswell, Sterlington.

SHOOTING INCIDENT

General Berates Reds Over Raids

PANMUNJOM, Korea (AP) — Gen. George H. Cloud, U.N. Command spokesman on the Korean Armistice Commission, upbraided the North Koreans Saturday for raids in the demilitarized zone only a few hours before the commission met to deal with other recent fighting.

"If it is not your side's intention to destroy itself, I demand that you prevent your bloodthirsty marauders from entering our portion of the demilitarized zone," the Marine general declared.

He demanded that the North Koreans "take immediate steps to keep your murdering bandits under control and on your side of the military demarcation line" after present evidence that North Korea raids cost the lives of three U.S. soldiers this week.

Maj. Gen. Chong Hwang Chang, the North Korean spokesman, called the charges fabrications and accused the U.N. Command of sending armed spies into North Korea.

COUNTER CHARGE

"You are trying to accuse and blame us for another shameful incident that happened on your side, or else you have deliberately murdered some of your personnel in a scheme trying to serve your political purposes," Chong charged.

Chong galvanized the packed commission room when in a mock threat he aimed a captured Soviet-made pistol, displayed by Cloud as evidence, at the general. Another North Korean delegate aimed a captured Soviet-made submachine gun at the British member of the commission.

Cloud angrily demanded, "Where is your dignity?" and the North Koreans put down the weapons.

The Saturday firefight between U.S. soldiers and the North Koreans marked the sixth day of such exchanges.

It proved that despite efforts to play down the armistice infractions, as ordered Friday, U.S. soldiers still were engaged in combat in Korea despite a 10-year-old uneasy truce.

Cloud also castigated the North Korean Communists for sending a patrol through the demilitarized zone and ambushing a jeep early Monday.

Two American soldiers were killed and a third was wounded.

Then Cloud went on to tell the Communists how their four comrades were wiped out within the Dragon Head area, north of Munsan.

The commission, meeting was tense. At least 500 persons fought for places in the two dozen windows overlooking the room where five U.N. commission members usually face five North Korean and Chinese Communist members.

Integration Letter Topic For Diocese

Catholics Urged Accept Mixing As Inevitable

Catholics of north and central Louisiana will be called upon by their Bishop today to accept desegregation with "understanding and restraint and help put an end to discrimination based merely on race, color, creed or national background."

The message of Bishop Charles P. Greco of the Diocese of Alexandria is contained in a pastoral letter scheduled to be read at all masses at churches and chapels in the diocese this morning.

"LITTLE DOUBT"

"Certainly there can be little room for doubt at this time that desegregation is inevitable," the Bishop stated in his nine-page letter, the first major pastoral letter of this type he has issued since he became bishop 17 years ago.

The letter does not mention integration of Catholic schools in the diocese but a diocese school official revealed that no desegregation of the schools is contemplated at this time. Catholic

The Very Rev. Msgr. H. C. Teacle, superintendent of schools for the diocese, said "Bishop Greco has set no timetable for the desegregation of the Catholic schools in the Diocese of Alexandria.

"De-facto, any integration of Catholic schools would have to follow that of the public schools."

Explaining the acceptance of segregation by churches in the past, the bishop said that the "Church did not approve segregation as a matter of principle, as though the color of a man's skin should determine his value in the eyes of God or his equality before the law of the land."

The Church worked within an existing segregated society, the Bishop said, because under the circumstances for her to accomplish her task of canctifying souls.

Describing desegregation as inevitible, Bishop Greco said in his letter:

"We earnestly appeal to our people to accept the inevitible with understanding and restraint, with true Christian charity and an awakened sense of justice, with good grace and characteristic American fairness."

The letter urges men of all races "the grace to desist from violence" and states:

"We pray God to help us put an end to discrimination based merely on race, color, creed or national background — and to do this out of love of God, as more in keeping with the law of brotherly love proclaimed by Christ, in adherence to the appeal of our supreme pontiff and out of consideration for the best interests and prestige of our country."

Bishop Greco also admonished Negroes to "work conscientiously" to prepare themselves to "exercise adequately, not only their rights, but the obligations and responsibilities that are theirs as children of God, and as loyal, respectable and law - abiding citizens."

There are more than 85,000 Catholics in the Alexandria diocese which includes all civil parishes north of Rapides Parish, Avoyelles and Vernon. There are 83 Catholic church - parishes and more than 100 missions in the diocese.

A pastoral letter is written normally to clarify a point of doctrine that may be in doubt. The Catholic church has been consistently teaching the doctrine contained in the letter, one diocese official explained. The Bishop's letter puts it into effect in this diocese, he said.

NEAR VIRGIN ISLANDS

First Hurricane Picks Up Power

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Hurricane Arlene picked up power and forward speed Saturday and prompted extension of a hurricane watch to the U.S.-owned Virgin Islands.

The U.S. Weather Bureau at San Juan, Puerto Rico, at the same time discontinued a hurricane watch for the northern Windward islands.

The Weather Bureau said Saturday night the northern Leeward Islands could expect some taste of the hurricane Sunday, and said the season's first tropical storm would affect Puerto Rico by Monday if it holds to its west-northwest course.

At 5 p.m. Saturday Arlene was about 360 miles east of Guadeloupe, French West Indies, and 675 miles east-southeast of San Juan.

Gale winds extended outward from the center 175 miles to the northeast and 75 miles to the southeast.

ON WATCH

Residents of the Leeward island chain and the French island of Martinique were placed on a hurricane watch.

At the Atlantic missile range tracking station on Antigua, in the Leewards, workers secured loose gear and boarded up windows. About 160 American men work at the station. They are employes of Pan American World Airways and Radio Corporation of America. A few have their families on the islands.

As the hurricane approached the first land masses in its path, aerial reconnaissance was stepped up. The Weather Bureau at San Juan was sending four planes a day into the center.

Hot Time Seen In Area Today

Although red paint is not expected a hot time is nevertheless indicated for the area with high readings set for today and Monday at between 94-98 degrees.

HOT

Moscow Ban Signing Set By Secretary

MOSCOW (UPI) — Secretary of State Dean Rusk arrived Saturday to sign the East-West nuclear test ban treaty and begin cold war talks which he said could be "a turning point in the affairs of mankind."

Rusk said the agreement was "a very important event which could become historic" but stressed that this depended on whether progress continued in the efforts to relax tensions between the West and the Soviet Union.

Rusk flew in from Washington a few minutes before British Foreign Secretary Lord Home arrived from London. Home will join him and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in the signing Monday and the exploratory talks that will follow.

DELAYS VACATION

There were reports in Washington that President Kennedy sent a personal message with Rusk to Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev, who was delaying his vacation to remain in Moscow for the talks.

Rusk said the prospects for a cold war easing depend on what follows the treaty.

"The world is dangerous and this treaty could help to make the world less dangerous," he said. "But by itself it could do no more. We could stop here but we must go on."

What is needed, he said, is further "step by step progress" toward a settlement between East and West.

"This course is not easy," he said. "Nevertheless, the U.S. government and people are determined to follow this course and

Tragedy Strikes At Flying Meet; Two Are Killed

ROCKFORD, Ill. (AP) — Tragedy hit a second time at a mass flying meet of aviation enthusiasts Saturday when a Virginia restaurant owner and his wife died in the fiery crash of their home-made plane.

Tyndall, 41, had taken his wife for a spin and was gliding into Greater Rockford Airport for a landing when he was ordered by the tower to resume airspeed and circle the field again because a twin-engined craft was on the glide path behind him.

Inspector John Harrington of the Civil Aeronautics Board said normal procedure would have been to pick up speed and altitude, then turn to the right and circle. The Tyndall plane peeled into a left bank immediately and fell out of control. It belched flames and both occupants were charred.

Tyndall was identified from the contents of his wallet. He had built the plane, "Mr. Splinters," in the attic of his home, and a section of the wall was taken out for its removal by crane when it was completed.

The body of Tyndall's wife, Mary Ellen, was identified by Paul Poberezny of Hales Corners, Wis., president of the Experimental Aircraft Association, a group of 15,000 civilian flyers, which is holding its annual fly-in-meeting at the airport.

Volume Of Entries Rises For Contest

There was a wide assortment of subject matter in photographs winning awards in the fifth week of the Morning World and News-Star Photo Contest. And the volume of entries was more than double that of the previous week.

Richard G. Lowery, P. O. Box 42, Haile, won $5 with the first place photo in Class A, babies and children. It was a closeup study of a happy little tot riding on a rocking horse. Lowery earlier in the contest won two seconds and two thirds.

(See Photos, Page 4B)

First place in Class B, teenager or adult activities, went to a picture captioned "Contact," showing G. P. "Porky" Jordan of West Monroe with hands on tip of crop dusting plane propeller, in act of starting engine. It was taken by Lee Estes, 4114 Blanks St., Monroe, who earlier in the contest won four firsts and a second. The award is $5.

In Class C, scenes and table tops, photos taken by L. A. Henderson, 700 Hilton St., Monroe, were in first and third places for a total of $7 in awards. Last week his entries took one second place and two third place awards.

His first place picture captioned "The Lonely Vigil," is of a gaunt tree on the Arizona desert where vegetation is sparse. Third place is a view "looking up through spiral stairs at skylight," and presents an unusual design.

A katydid which has just emerged from its old shell and is waiting for its wings to dry before taking flight, is the subject of the first place $5 award picture in Class D, taken by Syl Breard, 400 Eason Place, Monroe, who earlier won a first in the same class.

Breard said, "The katydid had just come out of the ground and climbed up on the tree when the kids hollered, 'Come out and take the picture, Daddy.' It's rather difficult to take a picture with five kids looking over your shoulder. It was taken with a four by five speed Graphic closeup and flash was bounced in the tree."

Before taking to the tree the katydid had just come out of a hole in the ground.

IN ELECTION YEAR

Voter Registration Causing Confusion

As the November 6 deadline nears for voter registration, Mrs. Mae Lucky, Ouachita Parish Registrar of Voters, said that there is "quite a lot of confusion" here concerning registration requirements.

Louisiana regulations state that to qualify for the vote a person must:

1. Pass a citizenship test by answering simple questions about government.

2. Prove his ability to read and write.

3. Prove that he has been a resident of Louisiana for at least one year and a resident of Ouachita Parish for at least six months.

The main difficulty, according to Mrs. Lucky, centers around the applicants' ability to prove six parish residence. "There are a number of documents that a person can submit as proof," she said, "but so many people do not bring the necessary material."

At least three documents are needed, and any of the following are valid: a driver's dicense at least six months old, a 1962 hunting or fishing license, a six months old bank statement, a deed or contract on property, insurance cards (automobile or group insurance), property tax receipt for 1962, W-2 form for 1962, pink slip for auto license plate at least six months old, pass book for building loan or other accounts or polio registration card.

Mrs. Lucky stressed that fraternal membership cards or courtesy cards are not acceptable.

After the applicant submits proper proof of residence, he must fill out registration forms without notes or help from anyone else.

Mrs. Lucky emphasized that the rules in her office are being enforced on a uniform basis all over the state and that they apply to all races alike.

Another common fault, Mrs. Lucky continued, is failure to notify the registrar immediately of all changes of address. Even a move of only a few blocks could mean a difference in precinct.

"Anyone who lives in one precinct and goes to another to vote is doing so illegally," Mrs. Lucky pointed out.

Lake Storms Push East; Ship Grounds

By United Press International

Violent thunderstorms, which raked the Great Lakes during the night and caused a freighter to run aground, pushed eastward to the Atlantic Saturday along a line from Missouri to Virginia and Northern New York.

Severe thunderstorm warnings were posted through mid or late evening of sections of Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, New Jersey and New York.

Skies cleared over the Rockies, where thunderstorms were blamed for Colorado's worst traffic accident in two years. It claimed the lives of six persons Friday near Silver Plume, Colo.

Northern Indiana was one of the hardest hit areas in the Great Lakes storms. A tree was uprooted onto a highway near Columbia City, Ind., causing a two-car collision which killed a woman and injured six other persons.

The storms caused a sharp drop in atmospheric pressure over the Lake, touching off a seiche, which caused water levels to drop 2½ feet along the Michigan shore. The freighter Robert J. Paisley ran aground in the Black River Channel at South Haven, Mich., but managed to free itself when water levels returned to normal.

The U.S. Weather Bureau at Miami, Fla., ordered a hurricane watch for the northernmost of the Windward Island chain and all the Leeward Islands. The islands rim the northeast edge of the Caribbean Sea, where Hurricane Arlene was pushing northwest at about 16 miles an hour, packing winds up to 100 miles an hour.

CRITICAL ACTIVITY

Syncom Testing Is Slated Tonight

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The national space agency's new communications satellite, Syncom 2, now drifting slowly westward toward a virtually stationary spot orbit above South America, will be put through critical tests Sunday night.

The agency announced Saturday that the two major world-wide news services, United Press International and Associated Press, would attempt to bounce news dispatches and photographs off the moonlet between New Jersey and the West Coast of Africa at about 10 P.M. EDT Sunday.

This is one of the objectives of Syncom 2, the first of a new breed of communications satellites. Scientists say only three of them could provide a round-the-world system for radio, teletype and photo facisimile transmissions.

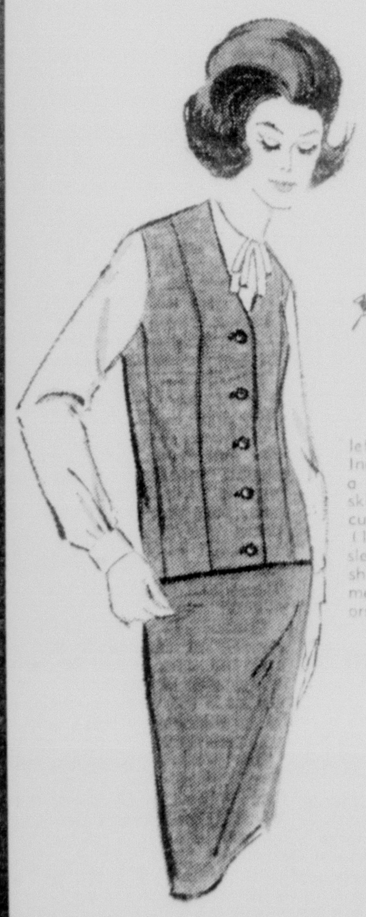

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) said preliminary technical experiments with Syncom 2 have been 'very satisfactory.'

Pastoral Letter's Text Is Given In Full Here

Here is the text of a pastoral letter to be read in Catholic churches this morning at mass throughout the Diocese of Alexandria. The letter is from Bishop Charles P. Greco, Bishop of Alexandria. Here is the letter:

"TO OUR DEVOTED CLERGY, RELIGIOUS AND LAITY.

"Dearly beloved in Christ:

"How very accustomed you are to hearing me, your Bishop, appeal to you in this public, but personal way to lend your generous and prayerful support to some work or program undertaken for the good of the Church and souls! Indeed, every Bishop feels that one of the vital endowments of his office as a spiritual shepherd is the ability to turn to his flock for the help he needs in solving various problems that confront the Church, especially those of his own Diocese.

"At this time, then, I turn to you, my beloved flock in Christ, and I call to your attention a serious problem facing us all, a problem that you and I, working and praying together, must seek to resolve in the light of the observations I now make.

"A social revolution, underscored by agitation, turmoil, violence and even bloodshed, is sweeping the country and striking at our Southland. It has now moved into our own Diocese. Varying in aspect and intensity according to region, it has reached alarming proportions. What with mounting tempers on both sides, only God knows if even greater evils are not yet to come.

"Our American Negroes are demanding the equality of treatment which, as children of God and as fellow citizens, they feel, after a century of emancipation from the state of slavery, they have a right to enjoy. To obtain these rights they are now well organized, supplied with necessary resources, and are ready to fight and even die for their cause.

"The problem must be calmly and realistically appraised from the standpoint of both the Negro and the white.

"At the time of its emancipation, the Negro race, through no fault of its own, found itself ill equipped to cope with the social, economic and political responsibilities of its newly created status. In the years that followed, Negroes made notable strides and gained the good will, kind consideration and even sympathetic support of their white fellow citizens.

"Nevertheless, in the South particularly, whites felt that the Negro race as a whole, with many individual exceptions, remained deficient in cultural and education al development, and these deficiences rendered them incompetent to exercise the full rights of citizenship. On the other hand the Negro race felt, and still feels, that this very denial of the use of their rights has been a major factor in hindering their advancement and progress toward cultural maturity and civic competence.

"This notwithstanding, the relationship between Southern whites and Southern Negroes in the past was not one of mutual animosity or hatred. In a southland plagued with economic ruin and depression, it was the white race that built schools for the Negroes and gave them such employment as was available. True enough, the schools were often inadequate, as was the remuneration for their work. But in many instances this "inadequacy" was not due to ill will or opposition pure and simple, but to the tragic fact that the South, flat on its back, was hopeless and resourceless because of the devastation wrought upon it by the Civil War.

"It must be remembered, then, that the present attitudes on segregation manifested by the whites towards the Negro are those that have been inherited, and in great measure are not imputable to the present generation of whites.

"The concept of slavery could not be obliterated from the emotions of the whites, either by proclamation or by edict. Moreover, the attitudes of social inequality were fostered by, and received the stamp of approval from, high governmental officials and agencies.

"Abraham Lincoln himself, who proclaimed t h e emancipation of the Negroes from slavery, declared that he did not favor social and political equality of the races. In a debate with Mr. Douglas in 1958, Lincoln stated: "I am not, nor ever have been, in favor of bringing about in any way the social and political equality of the white and black races."

"The Supreme Court of the United States itself upheld the spirit and principle of slavery in the Dred Scott decision. The same high tribunal, which in 1954 decreed segregation unconstitutional, had previously approved the concept of segregation in the 1896 decision which established judicially the "separate but equal" doctrine.

"The Supreme Court decisions and those of other federal and state courts, as well as the statement by Lincoln, canonized, as it were, the principle and patterns of segregation, especially for the South where most of the Negroes lived. In other words, the way of life known as segregation in America had the endorsement and approval of the highest civil authorities in the land.

"Understood in this light, segregation was handed down officially from generation to generation, until it became so firmly rooted and established in the hearts and minds of men that no mere edict of a court, reversing its stand, could change it in the course of a few years.

"Besides the official approval of segregation on the part of those representing the highest civil authority in the land, the white people of the South witnessed the actual or 'de facto' segregation on the part of the churches. Our white people observed various denominations building churches, schools and universities for the Negro and were often asked to contribute to them. This they frequently and generously did, and in the process of it all, received the deeper conviction that segregation had the blessing of the churches, and hence that of God.

"Furthermore, our Catholic people, particularly in the South, witnessed archbishops, bishops, clergy and religious — and I myself was among them — building separate churches, schools and a university for Negroes. They were also aware that during the past decades there were no Negro students in our better known Catholic colleges and universities throughout the country until recently; they were also aware that there were no Negro priests in the diocesan and religious clergy until recent times, etc.

"Thus from what they saw, our Southern Catholics formed their conscience as to the moral lawfulness of segregation. They concluded that if the Church practiced it, it must be right and therefore had the approval of God.

"Today, however, these same churches that once followed, and in some measure still follow, the pattern of segregation, declare through their writers and speakers that it is immoral. Understandably enough, t h i s causes people to wonder and to be confused. They evaluate these proclamations as changing opinions of churches and churchmen, and not as the will of God. It causes them to ask logically: if it is wrong today, why wasn't it wrong ten-twenty and a hundred years ago? If it is wrong today, why wasn't it wrong in the mind of Lincoln? Why wasn't it wrong in the minds of the Supreme Court of another era?

"These facts and observations are mentioned only to help explain the attitudes of the whites which have built up through the decades, but for which they should not be indiscriminately blamed.

"At this point, however, it must be made clear that the Church did not approve segregation as a matter of principle, as though the color of a man's skin should determine his value in the eyes of God or his equality before the law of the land. No, the Church worked within the framework of an existing segregated society because, true to her nature, she considered the care of individual souls, the administration of the Sacraments and Christian education her primary and essential task.

"The initiation of social reforms could not be allowed to take precedence over the all important work of sanctifying souls. Had the Church undertaken to remove segregation from the Southern scene, her effectiveness in carrying out her fundamental spiritual mission would have been seriously hampered, and many souls would have gone without the supernatural graces that could come to them only from having the Church active in their midst.

"Recall that in Our Lord's parable of the weeds and the wheat the servants, upon discovering the weeds, asked if they should not begin immediately to pull them up. But the householder, who in the parable stands for God, ordered that the weeds be allowed to grow, "lest in gathering the weeds you root up the wheat along with them." (Mt. 13:29).

"In other words, we must not rush to eliminate one evil, if it means creating another and even a worse one in its place.

"There are therefore, and indeed always have been, certain regrettable situations which the Church could not approve of in theory or in principle, but to which she could adapt herself in practice, in order to carry on her spiritual work with the greatest possible effectiveness. Thus the Church adapted herself to the caste system in India, not in approval of it, but in order to be of greater service to souls, hoping that in time the teachings of Christ and His way of life would prevail and solve the difficult social problem.

"Upon careful examination, isn't this what our beloved Pope John XXIII meant when he wrote in his much acclaimed encyclical "Pacem in Terris" that "racial discrimination can in no way be justified, at least doctrinally or in theory"?

"So as we face the present racial crisis, it seems to us that there is need of much prayer and good will. But these alone will not suffice; there is also need of a special education on both sides of the problem if an orderly solution is to be reached:

"(a) Education is needed on the part of the Negro to elevate himself so that he can merit acceptance as did other peoples and nationalites in the course of the development of our American nation.

"An example in this regard should be taken from those immigrants of the last century who, when they first came to our shore were given worse than segregated treatment. Through hard work and education, however, these people and their children of the next two generations carved a high place for themselves in the American culture and won the esteem and approbation of their fellow citizens.

"In like manner, our Negroes must work conscientiously to prepare themselves to exercise adequately, not only their rights, but the obligations and responsibilities that are theirs as children of God, and as loyal, respectable and law-abiding citizens.

We especially encourage young Negroes to continue in school and not drop out, thereby leaving themselves without the necessary high school education and training needed for useful Christian citizenship.

"(b) Education on the part of the whites should make them realize that the Negroes, like members of all races, are our brothers in Christ. They are members of God's common family and should therefore be given the consideration due to those made in the image and likeness of their Heavenly Father, the Father of us all.

"Christian love in practice means that we wish our brothers well, that we stand ready to help them when they are in need and, inasmuch as we reasonably can, make it possible for them to advance in better job opportunities, housing facilities and educational opportunities for their children.

"Certainly there can be little room for doubt at this time that desegregation is inevitable. The Supreme Court has declared it to be the law of the land, and has reaffirmed this decision at every challenge. It will gradually be enforced in every part of our country.

"We earnestly appeal to our people to accept the inevitable with understanding and restraint, with true Christian charity and an awakened sense of justice, with good grace and characteristic American fairness.

"The time has come that we aspire to greater maturity as a Christian nation and advance to a more Christian way of life, based upon the Commandment of Love proclaimed by Christ the night before He died; "A new commandment I give unto you, that you love one another as I have loved you." (John 13:34).

"I know this will not be easy for the many, because of inherited traditions and attitudes, but let us ask ourselves deep down in our Christian hearts: what would be the approach of Christ to this problem? Would it be one of resistance to the just aspirations of the Negro race, or rather would it not be one of love, commiseration and recognition of the rights of all men ? And should we not follow Christ? St. Paul the Apostle advised that we do: "Let that mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus." (Philip. 2:5).

"And now I entreat you, my devoted people of both races, to heed my guidance in this most grave matter confronting us.

"You are my flock, committed to my care by Our Lord Himself, and I can say with all the sincerity at my disposal that it is my deep concern for your well being that prompts everything I have written. If some choose to criticize my efforts in this regard, that is their concern: bringing you to Christ is mine, and all else is of little consequence. Be assured that the pain and anguish suffered by any of you in following my counsel in these difficult matters are fully understood and shared by me.

"We pray God to help us put an end to discrimination based merely on race, color, creed or national background - and to do this out of love of God, as more in keeping with the law of brotherly love proclaimed by Christ, in adherence to the appeals of our Supreme Pontiffs, and out of consideration for the best interests and prestige of our country.

"Let us, then, beseech God together that He will grant to men of all races and creeds the grace of understanding, patience and forgiveness, the grace to desist from violence a n d occasions of violence, and the grace to root out from their hearts every sentiment of animosity and ill will toward one another.

"With my fervent prayer for God's abundant blessing upon you and your dear ones, I am

Protest March Of 1,000 Is Held In Alabama

GADSDEN, Ala. (UPI) — An estimated 1,000 Negroes staged a massive protest march Saturday in this northeast Alabama industrial city and officers, aided by state troopers, arrested an estimated 600 demonstrators.

A Negro spokesman said further protests may be staged Sunday in the racially-tense city.

It was the largest segregation protest ever staged in Gadsden. It was sponsored by the Congress of Racial Equality and the Southern Christian Leadership Conference. CORE has been actively sponsoring civil rights protests here for the past two months.

There were no incidents. There were no reports of violence.

Mary Hamilton, a CORE field representative, said the march began about 10 a. m. at the Skyliner meeting hall.

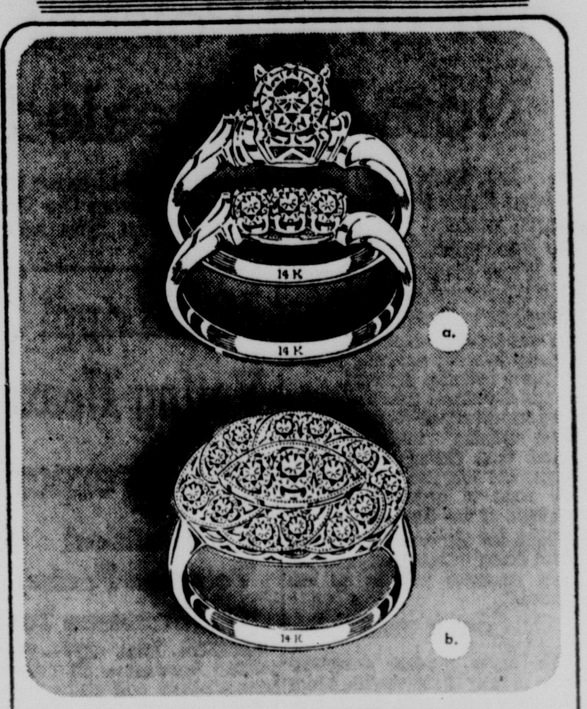

Four Negro ministers led the demonstrators. The men marched first, followed by children. Women with babies in their arms brought up the rear of the procession that was more than three blocks long.

The Negroes, singing spirituals and the N a t i o n a l Anthem, marched through the 6th and 11th street Negro housing projects into the Agricola shopping center that is being boycotted by the Negroes.

However, Etowah County sheriff's deputies denied firearms or prod poles were used.

Moscow Ban Signing Set By Secretary

The three foreign ministers will hold their first formal talks Tuesday.

They will be exploratory sessions and not negotiations. The issues under discussion are expected to include:

—Khrushchev's plan for a non-aggression pact between NATO and the Communist Warsaw treaty alliance. The West has opposed this in the past because it would imply recognition of Communist East Germany, a Warsaw Pact member.

—Measures to prevent surprise attack, including Khrushchev's suggestion last month that inspectors be stationed on opposing nations' terirtroy to report on troop movements and buildups.

—A program for reduction of troop strength in both halves of divided Germany, proposals to free military budgets, and other plans designed to relax tension.

—The possible extension of the nuclear test ban to include underground testing. Agreement on banning underground tests has been blocked by differences between the West and Russia on the number of on-site inspections necessary to safeguard a ban.

Volume Of Entries Rises For Contest

Monroe, won second in Class C, third in Class A and third in Class D this week for $7 in prize money. Previously he has won two firsts, two seconds and a third.

His winning pictures depicted: In Class A, captioned, "Think I'll Curve Him," small boy attired in baseball cap, sports shirt and shorts, gazing at baseball he is holding against his pitcher's glove. Class C, "Sails and Cypress," with sailboats in background and cypress trees at water's edge. Class D, "Jimminy Cricket," a cricket on an ear of corn, standing out in sharp contrast against light tone of large kernels.

Other winners, with second places bringing $3 and third places $2, were:

Class A, second place, small boy and girl dressed in cozy nighties, sitting on couch looking at picture book. The little boy is pointing out something of interest. It was taken by Vicki Bell, Route One, Mangham.

Class B, second place, a teenage boy talking to group of youngsters standing around him listening attentively, taken by Sage Redding, 2013 Sherwood, Monroe. Third place, a scene that might be entitled, "What's for Supper?" showing man lifting lid from pot on stove to see what is cooking, while the lady of the kitchen, standing by sink, looks back as if waiting for his reaction. It was taken by Mrs. Frances Grant, Pinecrest Drive, West Monroe.

One of the contest judges offered the suggestion that some pictures might be improved by better cropping to eliminate areas that contribute little to the overall effectiveness.

However, where photos are not printed by the persons taking them, it is hard to control this element. The judge suggested that a strip of white paper might be placed across dead space to improve composition.

Class A, babies and children, continued to rank ahead of the other categories in number of entries, with Class D, animal life and pets, second in number. Class C, scenes and table tops was third, and Class B, teenage or adult activities, last.

The contest has two more weeks to run. Black and white photographs taken by amateur photographers after July 1, 1962, submitted in the sixth week of the contest will be judged Thursday. Entries received after that time will be judged in the final week of the competition.

A total of 40 in prizes is awarded every week with $5 going for first places in the four categories, $3 for second, and $2 for third. Print class should be listed on back, along with name and address of photographer.

At the close of the local contest a $5 grand award will be made to the photograph selected as best in each class. Negatives must be available on request for grand award winners to be entered in the national competition to follow in which several prizes ranging up to $1,000 will be at stake. In the national contest prints will be judged along with entries from other participating newspaper.

As demonstrated by entries received thus far, some of the best pictures are of everyday events and common scnes which await only the action of an alert photographer to preserve them on paper.

Contest rules will be published frequently in the Morning World and News-Star.

Russ Denounces China Charges

It accused Red China of attempting to expand the nuclear arms race and called its leaders connivers with those who advocate nuclear war.

The charges were contained in an official statment denying the Chinese Communists' accusations two days ago that the partial nuclear test ban treaty to be signed Monday by the Soviet Union, the United States and Britain aims at consolidating the nuclear monopoly of those three parties.

also was an habitue of the sordid night life of London. By his own admission at his trial, he was "a thoroughly immoral man."

He went through the final days of his life snubbed by his noble friends, and he died a bitter man. In the final hours, he penned several notes and left them in the Chelsea apartment where he was staying with Noel Howard Jones, a young advertising man who testified in his defense.

A note to Jones was released by Jack Wheatley, Ward's lawyer. Unsigned, in three pages of spidery handwriting that became progressively illegible, it began:

"I'm sorry I had to do this here. It's really more than I can stand —the horror day after day at the court and in the streets—it's not only fear—it's a wish not to let them get me. I'd rather get myself."

Girl Injured In Collision

An 18 - year - old Monroe girl suffered bruises and abrasions late Saturday night when the car she was riding in was involved in a collision and skidded into the Southern Bell telephone building at Grammont and Catalpa Streets.

Rushed to St. Francis hospital for emergency treatment was Mary Smith, 18, of 1000 S. 7th St. She was a passenger in a vehicle driven east on Grammont Street by 15-year-old Margaret A. Young, 206½ S. 2nd St., Monroe. The Young vehicle collided with a car, southbound on Catalpa Street, driven by Negro Fate Bankers, 59, of 1814 Milhaven Rd., Monroe.

The impact of the collision spun Miss Young's auto across the intersection into the northeast corner of the telephone company building. Her vehicle was extensively damaged, police said. Both Miss Young and Bankers were ticketed for reckless driving. Police said the intersection is controlled by a flashing red and yellow light, which calls for both vehicles to slow down to such an extent that they can stop if another car is coming.

Earlier in the day, a two-bedroom house, belonging to Negro Ella Mae Hawkins, at 610 Harris St., burned to the ground. Trucks 15, four and two from the Monroe fire department rushed to the scene of the fire, but were unable to save the house. They were able to keep the house next door, at 608 Harris St., from burning. It was slightly damaged by flames. Cause of the blaze was undetermined, but firemen believe it to have originated in a bedroom.

Bail Is Posted For Negroes In Rights Cases

WASHINGTON (AP) — Units of the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations put up $160,000 in bail to free Negro demonstrators jailed at Birmingham, Ala., last May, it was reported Saturday.

The money, provided when most other bond sources had dried up, played a major role in cementing the racial settlement there.

A union source, confirming this, said $40,000 each was made available by the federation itself, its industrial union department, the United Automobile Workers and the United Steel Workers.

The source of the cash and the details of how it was obtained had never been spelled out before. It came at a crucial moment in the month-long Negro effort to topple racial barriers in Birmingham.

A total of 849 demonstrators were still in jail when Negro and white leaders announced a settlement on May 10. A key provision was that those still jailed would be released.

The union source said representatives of the demonstrators then telephoned Walter P. Reuther, president of the U.A.W. and AFL-CIO's industrial union department, asking urgent help. He was reached in Washington.

Olin Expansion Provides Pollution Safeguard

WASTE WATER FROM the West Monroe paper mill flows at the rate of 1200 gallons per minute through a pilot effluent system of ponds which has been in operation sinec 1956. W. W. McBride, Olin forest engineer.

A FOUR ACRE settling basin is provided for water discharged from the chemical recovery unit of Olin's West Monroe pulp and paper mill.

Along the Ouachita River, just below West Monroe, a heavy tractor starts up each morning at 5:00 o'clock. Working 14 hours a day, this dozer busily pushes down dense bottomland growth, leaving neat windrows of piled brush across the cleared land.

Less than a mile away, steaming water pours down over a huge sharply inclined "Cascade Flume," adding oxygen to process water just released from the manufacture of paper.

And across 16 Louisiana parishes and two Arkansas counties, weather modification generators stand by to combat drought conditions.

Site Clearing

The heavy dozer is clearing the site for extensive oxidation ponds for water discharged by the West Monroe paper mill. The construction of a new effluent treatment system was recently announced by officials of Olin's Forest Products Operations, as a part of a multi - million dollar modernization program of the corporation's West Monroe plant.

"We are giving oxidation treatment to all discharged paper mill water now," M. H. Collet, Olin vice president and manager said. "However, the mill improvement program we have recently begun includes added production and the use of more water."

The new oxidation system will replace present treatment methods and also take care of the extra water to be used in the future, he added.

Plan Approved

Collet said that the paper mill effluent treatment system under construction has been approved by the Louisiana Stream Commission.

The five holding ponds under construction will each be 400 feet wide and more than a mile and a quarter in length. Succeeding ponds will be two feet lower in surface elevation, allowing the water to cascade over "baffles" as it moves between ponds. The system, almost seven miles in length and 315 acres in area, will retain the water for 14 days before it is discharged.

The water will eventually flow into the Ouachita River at a point about a mile below Lock and Dam No. 4.

To Use River Water

According to Olin officials, by 1967 the West Monroe paper mill water needs will jump to 20 million gallons of water per day compared with the 13 million gallons presently used.

Currently, Olin gets all of its water from a system of 9 deep wells.

"We recognize that to place this extra demand on sub-surface water may have an adverse effect on the supply for the city of West Monroe," Collet said.

"For that reason we are building a pipeline to provide 12 million gallons of water per day from the Ouachita River. We will then have to draw only 9 million gallons from our existing wells, 5 million less than is presently used."

Water will be taken from the river by the Olin pipeline downstream from Lazarre's Point at the foot of Mitchell Lane.

Weather Modification

Collet stated that Olin and three other area paper mills, along with farmers and timberland owners, are major contributors to the Northeast Louisiana Water Resources Corporation.

"While this organi z a t i o n doesn't take credit for all the recent rainfall, it is a fact there has been a marked increase since the generators have been running," Collet said. "We feel that the fresh water entering the Ouachita River due to rainfall has had a beneficial effect on both the quantity and the quality of the water."

A contract was signed June 15, 1963 with the I. P. Krick Corporation of Denver for a six-month period. Fred Huenefeld, Jr., is president of the Northeast Louisiana Water Resources Corporation.

"Cascade Flume"

Harry Martin, Olin pulpmill technical superintendent, said that the system of the million-dollar oxidation ponds is based on more than six years of successful experiments. A pilot system for the treatment of paper mill effluent was constructed by Olin in 1956 and has been in use since that time, treating 1,200 gallons of water per minute.

"In addition, we are using a feature unique to the pulp and paper industry," Martin said. "Our 'Cascade Flume' is a large inclined flume with a corrugated surface over which effluent is pumped, aerating the water and allowing it to absorb needed oxygen."

The flume is a development of Olin's Research Department. It is based on a graduate research project done at Louisiana State University by Dr. Houston Huckaby, Olin senior research engineer.

Martin pointed out that paper mill effluent is not acid not is it poisonous to aquatic life. "We recover 93 per cent of our chemicals for re-use in the manufacture of paper," he added.

"Water from a paper mill is normally not toxic to human beings but is very similar to overflow water returning to the river with an accumulation of vegetable matter," Martin explained. "Once sufficient oxygen is restored, the effluent is harmless. That's the whole purpose of our present treatment system and the one we're building."

Olin officials estimate the new well ahead of the completion of oixdation ponds will be finished the mill modernization program.

The committee will be in charge of promoting and publicizing the United Givers Fund Drive. Rudisill pointed out that all news and publicity in the newspapers and on radio and television are donated by the news media at no cost to United Givers, as is billboard and display space during the drive.

Rudisill praised the Salvation Army and the Boy Scouts, two agencies of United Givers Fund, for their efforts in publicizing their agencies and the UGF and for their participation in the UGF campaign activities last fall.

He said, "We are anxious for all 13 agencies of United Givers to participate in our educational crusade to better inform the giving public where their United Givers Fund contributions are being put to work."

Tentative plans for public relations activities have been discussed by the Campaign Cabinet. The public relations committee will begin meeting soon to lay plans for the fall campaign promotion, Rudisill stated.

Charges Filed In State Case

NEW IBERIA, La. (AP)—Neil Vergeron of New Iberia was charged Saturday with two counts of kidnaping and threatening at gunpoint two local Negro employes.

The city recently hired three Negroes in the sanitation department, the first of their race to be employed by the city.

Police Chief Andrew Viator said he was given this account of what happened:

Early Saturday Vergeron forced the Negro men to ride on the fender of his car.

He took them to the city barn and told them to quit work. He told the Negroes to tell city officials that they were sorry they were hired.

Gifted Gain Opportunities From Center

Dr. Levelle Haynes, director, launched a six-week programmed workshop for gifted students in area parish schools and all schools in Monroe and West Monroe, systems served by the center.

For many people, Dr. Haynes said, special education carries the connotation — classes for trainables, retarded and slow learning students. Special education, however, applies to any student who deviates from normal to such an extent that he needs special help, he explained.

Mrs. Lottie T. Wilkins, visiting teacher in Caldwell Parish, was appointed supervisor of the study program.

Represented in the project are students from the parishes of Richland and schools in Monroe and West Monroe.

These students have an IQ of 125 or better. They range from seven to 17 years of age and from the fourth through high school senior grade level.

Courses which are being taken this summer include: seventh grade mathematics, basic mathematics, arithmetic of the whole number and numerals, trigonometry, introductory calculus, sets, inequalities and functions, Spanish A, elementary German, fundamentals of electricity, fundamentals of human physiology, English grammar and gas laws.

During the first two weeks of the workshop all participants studied in Garrett Hall on campus for three hours in the afternoon each Monday through Friday. Then they took their programs home to continue study. Students returned to Northeast once a week for scheduled periods during the following three weeks to bring used materials, take tests and report on their progress.

Work has been arranged to permit each student to advance at his own pace. The needed drill is included in his programmed book.

Last week of the Special Education project calls for students to study August 5 and August 9 from 1 to 4 p.m. in rooms 202 and 206, Garrett Hall. During this time, superintendents, supervisors, parish liaison personnel, principals, teachers, parents and other interested persons are invited to observe students at work.

Church Survey Is Basis For Pastor's Report

Monroe's First Baptist Church, through a church-elected Long Range Planning Committee, has conducted a survey of itself, its people, and the community in which it serves.

In this morning's "State - of - the - Church," message, Dr. James T. Horton will interpret the past, present, and future of the First Baptist Church in light of the committee's findings.

With the understanding gained from the pastor's message, a special business session has been called for Wednesday to present a written report and visual presentation to the congregation.

The Long Range Planning Committee will endeavor to convey what is has learned about the composition of the church, community, and surroundings. These finds and conclusions will provide a foundation for the committee and for the church as work continues to determine objectives and goals.

Premium Books For State Fair Are Completed

Publication of premium books has been completed for the 1963 Louisiana State Fair's livestock and agricultural shows, State Fair officials announced Saturday.

The catalogues give complete information on judging schedules, entry procedures, classes and dates and are available upon request by writing the La. State Fair, P.O. Box 9100, Shreveport.

The 58th annual expositition will be held October 18 through 27 on the Shreveport Fairgrounds. Various judging events of the livestock show will be held throughout the 10 days with the exception of the two Sundays.

More than $80,000 in premium money for classes in all major breeds of livestock and for agricultural competition is being offered this year. The adult show is open to breeders throughout the world, while entries in the junior division are reserved for Louisiana farm youths engaged in 4-H, FFA and FHA Club work.

Classes for beef cattle include Santa Gertrudis, Angus, Herefords, Polled Herefords, Shorthorns, Polled Shorthorns and Brahmans. Jersey, Holstein and Guernsey dairy cattle are eligible for entry.

Quarter horses will be making their fifth annual appearance with a two-day show on the opening Friday and Saturday.

An addition to the poultry show will be the annual meeting of the National Cornish Bantam Association. This will be the first time for the organization to convene during the local Fair.

Swine breeds include Durocs, Hampshires, Poland China and the second annual appearance of Yorkshires. Suffolk, Hampshires and Southdowns are sheep breeds eligible for the show.

Two special events will be the annual junior livestock auction on October 25 and the Gulf States Invitational Jersey Sale on October 24.

MISSISSIPPI CASE

Bar Disciplinary Testimony Ended

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) —U-S Dist. Judge Harold Cox ended weeks-long testimony here Saturday and took under advisement lengthy material in the bar disciplinary case of Negro attorney R. Jess Brown.

Cox gave attorneys two weeks to file supporting argumentative briefs and said he would study the voluminous material before rendering his decision.

Opposing attorneys again clashed in the hearing which grew out of Brown being counsel in a suit filed to desegregate schools in Leake County.

For the second straight Saturday a court aide acted to keep Judge L. Arnold Pyle, attorney for the court, in check.

Judge Cox originally ordered Brown to show cause why he should not be held in contempt of court when a plaintiff in the desegregation suit testified she had not authorized Brown to use her name.

Ming objected to a question as to whether the witness had ever been under a conviction.

When Ming said Pyle did not have "in his possession" such evidence to the conviction question, Pyle snapped "How do you know I haven't got in my possession" evidence.

A court aide jumped up and stood beside Pyle when Ming said "Your honor, I've got a right to object."

One week ago, a deputy marshal stepped between Ming and Pyle when Pyle barked at the Chicago lawyer.

Most of the testimony centered around whether Ruthie Nell McBeth, a Harmony Community Negro ever authorized Brown to use her name in the suit.

McBeth signed a deposition to the effect she did not give authorization for a desegregation suit.

A retainer permitting Brown to use McBeth's name in the suite, McBeth said, was what she termed a paper to "get the Hadmony School back."

The reference was to re-establishment of the Harmony School which had been consolidated with the Walnut Grove School.

Negroes Booked After Incident Early Saturday

Three Negroes, one a juvenile, have been charged with simple robbery by Monroe police following an incident which occurred near a Negro tavern on Renwick Street early Saturday.

Police edentified two of them as Charles Bernard Williams, 18, 1112 Powell Ave., and L. J. Tribble Jr., 23, of 4007 Elm St. The other being held in the juvenile detention home, was a 16-year-old Negro.

They were charged after a trio jumped on a Negro woman, Maggie Jenkins, 3511 Halsell St., and her companion Roy Swan, 3512 Church St., and robbed them of $17. The Negro woman told investigating officers the incident occurred after she and her escort left a Negro tavern on Renwick Street.

Monroe police also booked two area men for theft by check Saturday. O. C. Sikes, of Tioga, was booked on a warrant obtained for him and held under a $110 bond. Edward Terry, 24, of Rt. 1, Rayville, was also booked on a warrant but was transferred to the Ouachita Parish jail as he was reportedly wanted by Rayville authorities on morals charges.

Early Saturday, Monroe officers logged counts of driving while under the influence of intoxicating beverages, reckless driving and and driving without a valid driver's license against a West Monroe man, Alfred Carey Parker, 28, of 1001 Wilson St., He was taken into custody at 1:20 a.m. in the 2300 block of Louisville Avenue and held in lieu of bonds totaling $475.

Two persons suffered minor injuries in two separate collisions in Monroe Saturday. Randolph Bowles, 18, of 3014 Gordon Ave., sustained minor injuries when the car in which he was riding was hit in the side. He was a passenger in a car driven by Florent H. Hammond Jr., 323 Pargoud Dr., who was making a left turn into a driveway at 2806 South Grand St. when the accident occurred. He was struck by a vehicle, driven north on S. Grand Street by Helen E. Humphries, 27, of 507 Standifer St.

Earlier in the day, 66-year-old John W. Clark, of 1807 College Ave., sustained minor injuries when his car was struck in the rear on Sterlington Road while he was stopped, waiting to make a left turn onto Breville Street. He was hit by Benny M. Hortman, 33, Rt. 4, Box 20, also headed south on Sterlington Road. Hortman was ticketed for reckless driving.

Monroe police logged a DWI count against Bill Davis, 37, of 2402 Calypso St. late Saturday. Davis was taken into custody at 18th and DeSiard Streets at 9:30 p.m. and booked for DWI and reckless driving and held under a $435 bond.

West Monroe officers also booked a man for DWI. Late Friday, at 11:45 p.m., F. N. Moore, 34, of 102 W. Fairway Dr., West Monroe, was apprehended on Cypress Street and booked on the violation.

YULE WISH

DARTMOUTH, N.S. (AP)—Residents of busy Woodland Avenue, campaigning for less noisy speeding by motorists put up a 10-foot Christmas tree decked out with 100 lights. On it they placed a sign proclaiming that "All we want for Christmas is a nice quiet street." Traffic has already slowed considerably.

Mrs. Goldwater Rides Tide Of Fame

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—While a hurricane of publicity and predictions swirls around her controversial husband, Margaret Goldwater waits almost silently in the eye of the political storm.

She seldom ventures onstage, preferring that the job be handled by the junior senator from Arizona and leader of the Republican conservative wing, Barry Goldwater.

Her voice is soft, almost a purr. She speaks a blend of that language taught in the best schools for young ladies plus the colloquialisms of the West.

Her eyes are like a summer sky in Arizona, warm, light blue and distant. Often she is tanned a deep desert brown, a color that matches her hair. She is 5 feet 3 and just a pound on the plump side.

Her age?

"That," Mrs. Goldwater says, "is one of those subjects I must consider too touchy to discuss."

She is, however, old enough to vote, 21, but younger than her husband, 54.

Margaret Johnson was born in Muncie, Ind., and if the spoon in her mouth wasn't solid silver, it was heavily-plated. Her father, Ray Prescott Johnson, was for many years president of the Warner Gear Co. and one of the founders of the multimillion-dollar Borg-Warner Corp.

She attended Elmhurst Girls School in Connorsville, Ind., Mount Vernon Seminary, Washington, D.C., and the Grand Central Art School, New York City, where for three years she studied and painted.

For years her family spent winter vacations at Phoenix resorts and the summers in Michigan.

And in Arizona she met a young department-store scion, destined to become the nation's most prominent conservative.

Barry refused to let any grass grow under his feet. He pursued the young Miss Johnson from coast to coast and finally on New Year's eve of 1933 squirmed into a telephone booth, where Peggy was attempting to call her mother, and proposed.

She accepted before the last nickel fell into the pay-phone slots.

On Sept. 22, 1934, Peggy Johnson became Mrs. Barry Goldwater and settled into the uncluttered life of a business executive's wife.

What, does she think of the possibility of being the nation's First Lady?

"Why, it hasn't crossed my mind,' she answers. 'My husband isn't running for president, you know. He's a U.S. senator from Arizona."

Gartman Set To Contest Seat In House

DAVID M. GARTMAN

COLUMBIA (Special) — David M. Gartman, 42, of Columbia has announced his candidacy for the office of representative of Caldwell Parish in the Dec. 7 first Democratic primary.

He has lived here his entire life. He attended the Columbia schools, two years at LSU and has operated the automobile agency of his father, the late Frank Gartman, since 1940.

He is a veteran of World War II and served in the Pacific with the Air Force. In Columbia he has served as president of the Kiwanis Club, chairman of the Red Cross, Polio and Cancer Drives throughout the parish in past years.

He has been active in the Methodist church and has served on the board of stewards for the past 15 years. At the present time he is serving on the Columbia town council having been elected to this position in 1952.

He is married to the former Billie Porter, and has three children in school, two daughters and a son. Four years ago he ran for the representative office and in the second primary lost by a very close margin of 97 votes.

In making his announcement for representative, Gartman said:

"I firmly believe that the people of Caldwell parish and Louisiana are fed up with the present type of government and will vote into office people that are capable and sincere in giving our parish and our state the type of government that we need.

"During the past four years we have seen taxes increase with less and less benefits to the people. People have lost faith in the reckless spending by most of politicians without regards to people's rights and wishes.

"If elected I will vote and work for the following things — Pay raises for the state employees, school teachers, and school employees; more and better blacktop roads, new industry for Caldwell Parish, increased old age pensions, new swimming pool and recreational facilites for our children, elimination of the river pollution, along with building boat launching ramps and picnic areas on lakes and rivers in the parish, and many other benefits.

"I am a strong believer in "home-rule" and in State Rights and will do everything possible to secure this.

"During the coming campaign, I will stand on my record as a citizen and business man. I have nothing to hide, or promote but do have a real desire to see Caldwell Parish progress and receive the things that we are entitled to. I will not deal to mud - slinging, but will campaign on my record and qualifications and those of my opponents. I ask for the vote and support of every Caldwell Parish voter."

Appeal Is Issued On Viet Nam By Catholic Pontiff

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope Paul VI Saturday called on the Roman Catholic-led government of South Viet Nam — which has been accused of persecuting its Buddhist citizens — not to "ignore the rights" of its people.

The Pope's statement was couched in extremely cautious language, as could be expected on such a delicate matter, but there appeared little doubt his remarks had reference to the reported Buddhist persecutions that are said to have reached a critical stage lately.

Speaking to 42 Vietnamese students who attend European universities, the Pope called on them to discover the unity that is the "secret" of the church, and told them:

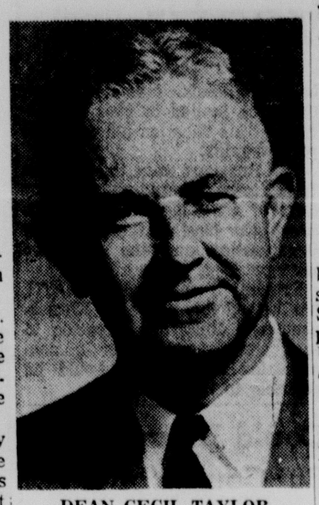

"And the discovery will be all the more marvelous inasmuch as it will show you how this spiritual vocation to unity applies equally to your noble nation, as to the others, with this essential priority that it doesn't ignore the rights, the merits, the characteristic aspects of the country named, that it doesn't suffocate the genius of the people to which it addresses itself.."

Modern Printing Causing Problem

WASHINGTON (AP)—The part-time counterfeiter who has access to a modern printing plant presents a growing problem for the U.S. Secret Service.

Secret Service chief James J. Rowley said in an annual report Saturday that some printing-plant employes have been "using such equipment after normal working hours without either the consent or the knowledge of their employers."

He said these supposedly trustworthy workers accounted for much of the counterfeiting activity during the fiscal year which ended June 30.

DEAN CECIL TAYLOR

Mutilated Body Of Child Found In Chicago Alley

CHICAGO (AP) — The mutilated and nearly nude body of an 8-year-old girl, missing since Thursday, was found in the weeds at the edge of a West Side alley Saturday.

Police said the victim, Diane Taylor, apparently was strangled and perhaps tortured and raped.

Lower areas of her body had been slashed with a knife and her nose bore knife punctures. A large laceration was found on her right thigh. A garment, believed to be her blouse, was stuffed in her mouth. Her face bore numerous bruises.

Her body was recovered about nine blocks from her home.

The body was found by Norlene Malauchnik, 9, who was walking her dog. The girl screamed and ran home and police were notified.

Police had been making an intensive search for the girl since her mother, Rita Taylor, a divorcee, reported her missing. Mrs. Taylor missed the child when she returned home from her job as a switchboard operator and receptionist.

VIET NAM DEBATES

'Persecution' Claims Endanger U.S. Program

SAIGON, Viet Nam (AP) — A bitter debate about religious persecution—real or imagined — in South Viet Nam has reached a point seriously threatening the United States' $500 million-a-year commitment to this Communist threatened nation.

The dispute between Buddhist leaders and the government of President Ngo Dinh Diem, a Roman Catholic, seems to have had only limited military effects on the war against Communist Viet Cong guerrillsa.

But international effects may be more serious.

Most nations in the non-Communist world, including the United States, have little sympathy for governments exercising real religious persecution.

And South Viet Nam is heavily depending on outside help to survive the Communist push.

For three months, Buddhist leaders have fanned the flames of civil disobedience in protest marches, speeches, pamphleteering and the spectacle of an aged monk burning himself alive in a Saigon street.

The government, tightly controlled by President Diem and his relatives, has hit back hard—with billy clubs, tear gas and bullets in some cases.

Twelve persons, Buddhists and bystanders, have been killed. Several hundred demonstrators have been injured more or less seriously. Hundreds of others have been questioned by police.

Mrs. Ngo Dinh Nhu, the president's sister-in-law, denounced the Buddhist leaders Saturday in remarks addressed to about 2,000 young girl recruits of the paramilitary women's corps she heads. She said:

"They unceasingly drum on the theme that "persecution is an act of the Middle Ages' and "thou shalt not kill, thou shalt not lie.' And all the while they are not ashamed to commit one after another of such sins, the most detestable being to immitate the Communist tactic of 'thief crying thief.' "

A point of general agreement between Buddhists and Catholics is that this is not a struggle between Buddhism and Catholicism.

The Catholic archbishop of Saigon has pointedly reminded parishioners of the traditional separation of church and state.

Last week U.S. Ambassador Frederick E. Nolting Jr. said he had never seen any evidence of religious persecution in South Viet Nam during his 2½ years here. The remark brought a landslide of angry reaction from Buddhists.

President Diem says his government has never persecuted any faith and that the national constitution protects all religions.

Few foreigners here were aware of serious religious issues in Viet Nam until last May 8. Troops and armored cars were hurled then into a Buddhist demonstration organized at Hue to protest a government order banning the flying of religious flags in public.

Buddhist flags in many communities had been ripped down by local authorities, while Catholic flags continued to fly for some weeks.

Those who argue that there has been long religious persecution in Viet Nam cite a letter of last April 20 signed by Interior Minister Bui Va Luong. The letter forbids the Baha'i faith "to have any religious activities in central Viet Nam and mountainous provinces" (of the north).

Ministers Are Hopeful For Treaty

MOSCOW (AP) — All the Big Three foreign ministers voiced hopes Saturday that the nuclear test ban treaty they are signing Monday will lead to bigger East-West agreements.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk said on his arrival from Washington the government and people of the United States are determined to follow up the signing with other steps to ensure peace.

Welcomed by Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko at Moscow's Vnukovo Airport, Rusk said, "We come here with hope and with the resolve to try to make this treaty a turning point in the affairs of mankind."

Gromyko made no formal speech of welcome. And his attitude was more restrained than Rusk's. But he told newsmen later, "It would (emphasizing that word) be good if this could be the starting point for big events."

"I hope it will be," he said.

British Foreign Secretary Lord Home, whose Comet jet airliner arrived 20 minutes after Rusk's U.S. Air Force jet passenger plane, contributed the view of Prime Minister Harold Macmillan's government.

"We have made a good beginning," he said. "And from here we hope to go on to other agreements between Russia and our countries. We look forward to several days of good and constructive work together."

Gromyko greeted both Rusk and Home effusively.

The Russian and the U.S. secretary smiled and pumped each other's hands warmly at the foot of the plane ramp. They swapped jokes and threw back their heads in laughter.

Rusk left later for Spasso House, the official residence of Ambassador Roy D. Kohler, where he will live in the busy week ahead.

Gromyko stayed on to receive Home.

Three times Home and Gromyko shook hands at the request of photographers — British, American and Russian.

"Troika," grinned Gromyko, with a reference to the perennial Soviet effort to divide all world organizations into three parts so the Soviet Union will have a veto.

Thus began the second act of a treaty negotiation that ended last week with initialing of the American-British-Soviet agreement to end testing of nuclear weapons in the atmosphere, outer space and under water.

The treaty will be signed in the Kremlin Palace at 4:30 p.m. (8:30 a.m. EST) Monday with Premier Khrushchev looking on. He clearly hopes the ceremony will make Moscow known as a peace capital, from which he can carry on his drive to bring the world under Communist rule without provoking a nuclear war.

A lavish banquet will follow the ceremonies.

It was believed Khrushchev will leave Moscow Monday night or Tuesday for his Black Sea vacation resort in Gagra.

Rusk has been invited to stay in the Soviet Union for a few days as Gromyko's guest. U.S. Embassy officials indicated Rusk might be invited to visit Khrushchev at his vacation hideaway for private talks.

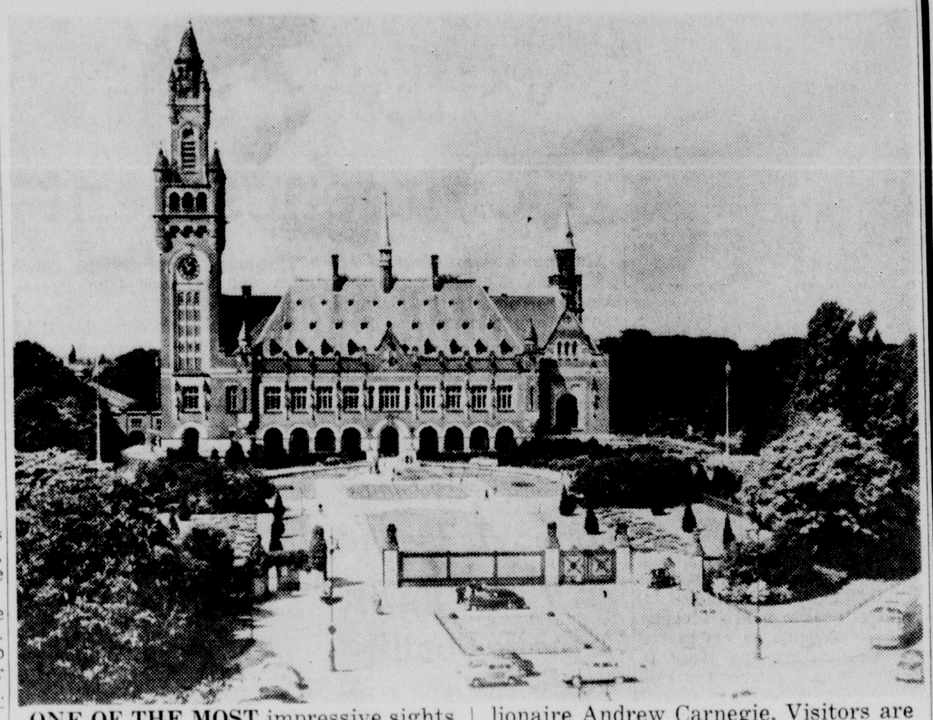

The Russians want the test ban treaty to be followed up with some form of a nonaggression pact between the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact powers.

France, a member of NATO, has vetoed this proposal. Khrushchev and Rusk are expected to seek some formula for a nonagression pledge that would be ceptable to both sides.

Could Hear Kitty But Couldn't Find

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Miss Viola Hatton hadn't seen her cat, Fluffy, for seven days but she could hear it.

She called the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Agent William Kelly pried up floor boards in a second floor bathroom—and out walked Fluffy.

ONE OF THE MOST impressive sights in The Hague, Holland's aristocratic city, is the Peace Palace. It was inspired and financed by the American millionaire Andrew Carnegie. Visitors are permitted to tour the handsome rooms which are resplendent with furnishings from many different countries.

SEAT OF GOVERNMENT

Holland's Aristocrat Of Cities Is The Hague

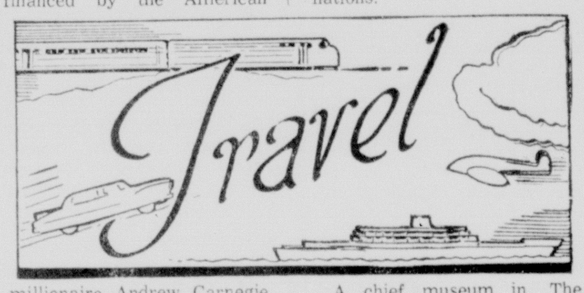

See The Hague and see some of the most splendid sights in all Holland.

The Hauge, with its massive shade trees, rolling lawns and beautiful gardens is often called the aristocrat of Holland. It has been the seat of Dutch government since the 13th century and the site of important international conferences since 1899. A tour of The Hague is truly a look at Holland past and present.

SIGHTSEEING

For example: the heart of The Hague is the Ridderzaal or Knights' Hall. Its 13th century towers recall a day when architects were as much concerned with defense as they were with construction of a shelter. This hall is surrounded by various government and parlimentary buildings, some of which can be visited.

There is the famous Peace Palace which was inspired and financed by the American millionaire Andrew Carnegie. A relative newcomer, this building was dedicated in 1913, and now houses the International Court of Justice. Visitors are permitted to tour the many room which are resplendent with handsome furnishings from many different nations.

A chief museum in The Hague is The Mauritshuis, a gem of 17th century architecture. It contains, in a dozen neat room, 15 Rembrandts -including four self portraits —and the artist's famous "Anatomy Lesson", done when he was only 26 years old. Vermeer, Hals, Ruysdael, Steen and many other Dutch many are represented here too.

The Municipal Museum was built in 1935. It houses an impressive collection of musical instruments from all over the world, authentic period rooms and a complete record of the Dutch artist Mondriaan's work. There is a terrace for coffee which overlooks the building's graceful gardens and pretty lily pond.

Both children and adults are delighted with Madurodam, another Hague attraction. It is Holland in miniature with vest-pocket height towers, castles, a pint-sized port, tiny farms and even its own radio station. The trains in Madurodam run on schedule, (just as the trains in Holland), the boats glide along the waterways and the traffic is as genuine as any you'll find on the highway.

OTHER ATTRACTIONS

Hague restaurants specialize in International, Indonesian and Dutch cuisine of a high order. Some of these dining spots are easy to find; others are tucked away in cozy little farmhouses or winding back streets. The local tourist office (called VVV in Holland) can direct you to one or two of the city's most exclusive private clubs which are not open to all Hollanders but do admit foreign visitors.

During the fall and winter months, night clubs flourish in The Hague. In the summer, these same clubs close up shop and move to the city's popular seaside resort Scheveningen. A popular beach boite is the small smoky Vliegende Hollander which features the internationally known jazz pianist and singer Pia Beck. In town, during the fall and winter, you can hear The Hague Philharmonic, one of the top orchestras in the world.

There is really no end of good things to do in The Hague. There are even a host of good outdoor cafes for those who'd rather see the sights by the seat of their pants than on foot.

Patient Booked In Murder Case

GULFPORT, Miss. (AP)—Gulfport police Saturday said a patient at the Veterans Administration mental hospital here has been booked on a murder charge in the beating death of a New Orleans man.

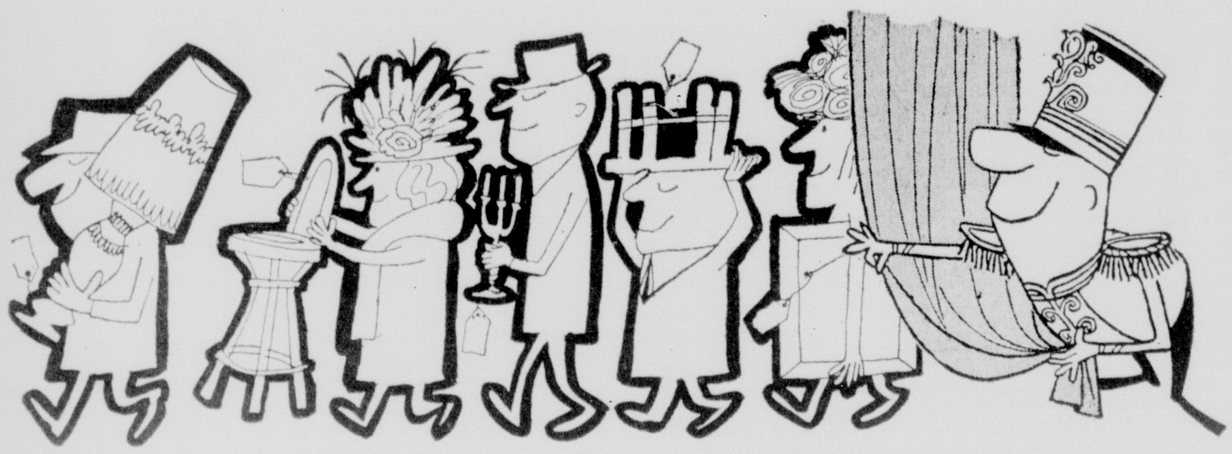

Detective Chief Paul Hale said Leasel Rayfield, 75, a Mobile, Ala., resident, has been transferred to the Harrison County jail here pending action on the grand jury to be empaneled later this month.

He is charged with the murder of Evans Elvert Brandt, 72.

Brandt was admitted to Memorial Hospital here July 26 for treatment of head injuries which police said were sustained in an altercation with Rayfield.

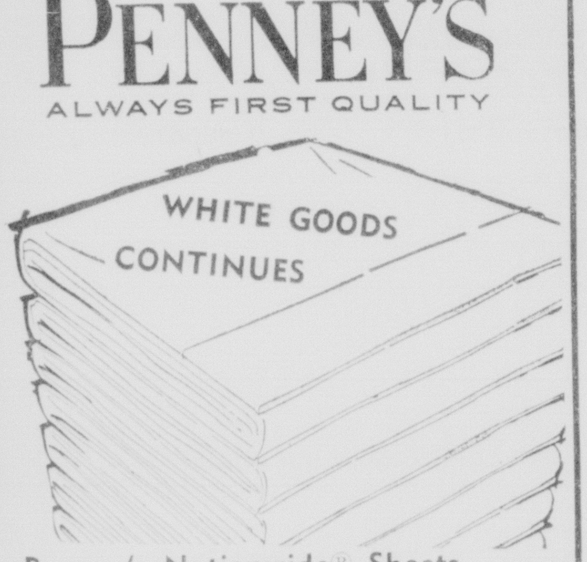

Hale said the two men shared a room at a rest home here.

JACK WHEATLEY, attorney for the late Dr. Stephen Ward, carries hat and raincoat Saturday as he walks from St. Stephen's Hospital in London after the death of his client. At right is a newsman. Ward, 50, died after several days at the hospital following an overdose of drugs. After the osteopath's death, Wheatley released a note in which Ward said that he had taken his own life. (AP Wirephoto)

Dr. Ward Was A 'Rake, Good-Time Charlie'

LONDON (AP) — Dr. Stephen Ward was a rake, a good-time Charlie who boasted of knowing almost everybody who was anybody. In his own view, he could make duchesses out of his girl friends if they strung along with him.

But long before he died, Saturday from an overdose of drugs, the playboy learned a hard lesson:

It gets lonely for a person who is in trouble.

Ward never got many people to buy the view that, like the fictional-Professor Higgins in George Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion," he could pick up a girl out of the streets and mould her future.

To all except a few who stood behind him, the 50-year-old Missouri-educated osteopath with a flair for painting portraits was only a man of loose living who provided sordid sex entertainment for blase elements of Britain's upper crust—and almost brought down Prime Minister Harold Macmillan's government doing it.

In the days before his trial Ward preened himself as a sophisticated, classless person who numbered peers and high government figures, streetwalkers and call girls among his friends.

As an osteopath, his practice included a wide range of patients with some social standing, among them W. Averell Harriman, U.S. diplomatic trouble shooter, and Sir Winston Churchill.

He sketched royalty at Buckingham Palace and made a profitable hobby as a portrait artist—and widened his circle of acquaintances.

He was considered a witty conversationalist and was in demand at smart dinner parties.

Up to that point Ward's friends conceded that he had it made. Even his acknowledged sexual appetite for young girls might not have gotten him into trouble if he had been discreet.

But that wasn't enough. Ward said he could steer their lives. He could take a girl fresh from the sticks, polish up her manners, teach her grammar, give her some taste in clothes, provide her with the necessary small talk and introduce her to powerful and wealthy men. After that it was up to her.

"It has never occurred to me that anybody could fail to understand my motives," Ward once wrote. "I genuinely like helping people."

It was through Ward that War Minister John D. Profumo met Christine Keeler at a swimming party on the estate of Lord Astor.

The Profumo-Keeler relationship brought Profumo's political career down in ruins, rocked the government with fresh security scares and exposed a half-world of vice in which prominent people were linked with prostitutes, perverts and drug addicts. And the end of the story still is not in sight.

When the climax came in his Old Bailey trial on charges of procuring and living on the earnings of prostitutes, Ward found sympathy in very short supply.

The testimony brought out the names of Profumo, Lord Astor, and Douglas Fairbanks Jr. None of these appeared in his behalf.

Neither did any of Ward's prominent friends. This fact was noted by the trial judge, Justice Sir Archie Marshall, and seemed to depress Ward. He could have used all the character witnesses available.

Ward's personal feeling of isolation was noted by acquaintances who talked with him the night before he was found in an apartment in London's arty Celsea district suffering from an overdose of drugs.

Miss Keeler, 21, and Mandy Rice-Davies, 18 — two stars in Ward's stable of goodtime girls—testified against him and their words must have carried weight with the jury.

BIZARRE AFFAIR

Railroad Workers Are Assassinated

HAMMOND, Ind. (AP) — A railroad engineer and a fireman were shot to death Saturday in a bizarre assassination as they sat in the cab of a locomotive in a Hammond freight yard.

A fellow crewman found the bodies after leaving the Diesel switching engine for only five minutes to get clearance for the 55-car train to pull out of the yards.

No gun was found. Police said they were unable to uncover any motive or suspect in the slayings.

The bodies of the victims, Roy M. Bottorff, 66, Lansing, Ill., and Paul A. Overstreet, 44, Hammond, lay in their seats on opposite sides of the cab. Bottorff, the engineer, was partially slumped out the window. Overstreet's pipe was on the floor at his feet.

Two .22 caliber exploded cartridges were on the floor, another had fallen in Overstreet's travel kit, and a fourth was on the ground outside.

Police Capt. Ray Johnson said detectives were questioning persons in the area in an effort to turn up tangible clues. Included were about a half dozen workers in buildings within 500 yards of the locomotive.

In a second outbreak of railroad violence, a bomb exploded on the New York Central tracks in Ashtabula, Ohio, late Friday night and hurled rocks through windows of nearby homes. No one was hurt. A 4-foot wide hole was torn in the roadbed.

Mart Shows Slight Climb In Past Week

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market broke a string of three declining weeks with a moderate gain last week.

However, July fell into the loss column.

Good gains early last week, on top of a late rally the week before raised some shouts of "summer rally" in Wall Street. But dissidents labeled the advance as merely a technical rebound.

The market was tugged and hauled by developments throughout the week.

On the favorable side were a decline in unemployment and a gain in employment, an increase in retail and department store sales and an acceleration of congressional action on the tax bill.

But the investment community worried about a drop in manufacturers orders in June and the belligerant moves of China.

The partial atomic test ban agreed on by the United States, Britain and Soviet Russia was believed to have had a heartening effect on the market.

Good earnings reports continued to come out for the second quarter with some major corporations such as General Motors, Jersey Standard and Dow Chemical achieving records. However, some market analysts expressed the opinion that the market already had digested these reports and now had its attention directed toward third quarter profits.

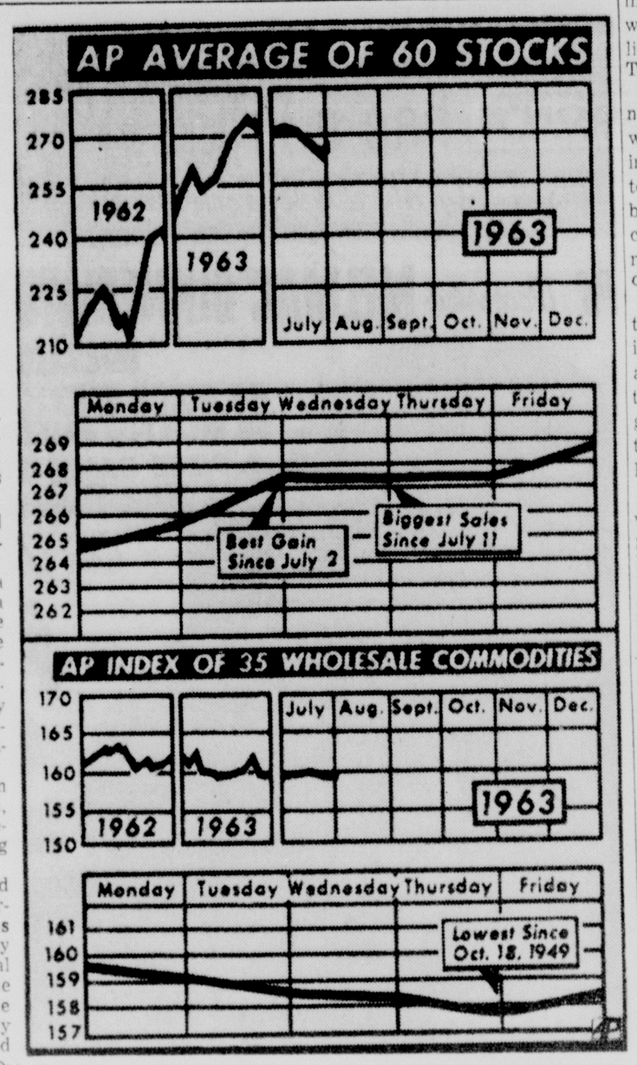

On Monday the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials snapped a skein of 14 "Blue Monday" losses.

The week's biggest gain came on Tuesday with the airlines again in the vanguard. But the rally came to an abrupt halt Wednesday and another mild decline occurred Thursday. On Friday the market stiffened and managed a moderate gain despite the usual caution that prevails just before a weekend.

U.S. government bonds advanced strongly, after sliding downward earlier in the month. Corporate bonds suffered the largest setback in the year, based on AP averages.

THE ASSOCIATED Press average of 60 stocks made its first advance in four weeks when it closed at 268.8 from 264.8 a week ago. Food and livestock led the commodity index as it moved lower this week to 158.2 from 159.6 in the preceding period. (AP Wirephoto Chart)

CAPRI, Italy (AP) — Acting on complaints of residents and tourists alike, this romantic isle's local government has banned all radio and phonograph playing on piazzas and beaches.

Cotton Futures Move Upward

They closed the week 85 cents to $1.20 higher than the previous week's close, when the market was up 45 cents to off $1.25. For this week, strongest gains, $1.06 and $1.20, were in the two most distant delivery months.

Activity was generally dull, with price firmness coming from scattered commission house and trade buying.

Overhanging futures prices were lower sport prices, slow export and good weather prospects in the growing areas.

The trade expects the official forecast for the 1963 crop, due from the department of agriculture Thursday, to run about 13.3 million to 13.5 million bales, against 14,867,000 a year ago.

Exports for the period ended July 31 were estimated at 3,402,000 bales, compared with 4,915,000 a year ago.

Volta Celebrates 'Independence' Day

OUAGADOUGOU, Upper Volta (AP) — The Republic of Upper Volta will celebrate its third independence day Monday by inaugurating an experimental television service to be called 'Voltavision.'

The first transmission will last two hours. It will be seen on receivers in public places and the homes of dignitaries. Not many citizens can afford a set of their own. A set costs about $320.

Jonesville Man Invents New Type Structure

David I. Patten, who obtained the patent, said his method of constructing a building for the Assembly of the Lord Jesus Christ cut costs by 30 per cent.

In short, instead of using center posts to support the roof, Patten's plan substituted cables anchored to the ground.

"One of the purposes of this invention was to provide a shelter having a cable network which is spread over compression members in a tension equalizing relationship of dissipating a strain exerted on one portion thereof to other portions of the structure," Patten explained.

With a steel roof anchored by a major cable, the building, which is 100 by 150 feet in size, serves as a state-wide meeting place for the Assembly of the Lord Jesus Christ.

"This group should be complimented for their willingness to make this venture, because this is the first building of its type in the world," Patten said.

Patten, owner-manager of the Patten Welding Co., pointed out that the method used in constructing the building enabled him to "provide a suitable shelter structure by using two or more compression members and an anchored cable."

"And it cut cost by 30 per cent over a conventional type of building," he added.

The method was patented May 22, 1962.

Patten explained that he could build similar structures up to 1,000 by 1,000 feet, open span, adding, "It provides a strong, durable building that can be used for many different purposes."

Patten pointed out that there are thousands of different types of structures known in the world today, but he added, "For the most part, such structures require a great deal of labor, expensive materials and a rather long time to erect."

He said, however, that his new method featured "ease of construction, durability, low cost, light materials and high stress resistance."

Patten invited any interested party to inspect the new building near Olla, explaining, "I can build such a structure for any purpose, anywhere, anytime." adv.

Grain Futures Fail To Show Strong Trends

CHICAGO (AP)—The grain futures market failed to muster more than brief feeble trends last week and prices generally were little changed on the Board of Trade.

All commodities developed firmness on the final day, however, which canceled out losses in some instances and added moderately to gains in others. Wheat, the best gainer, added only about a cent at best and corn was down major fractions to more than a cent.

Brokers said weather continued to be the major controlling factor in the pits, particularly for corn and soybeans, and that it sustained or added to prospects of good yields. Actually there was talk of the possibility of a 4 billion corn crop—a record high.

At the end of the week, wheat was ¼-1½ cents a bushel higher, September $1.78⅝-¾; corn ¾-1⅝ lower, September $1.22¼-½; oats ⅜-¾ higher, September 64⅜ cents; rye ⅝-1¼ higher, September $1.26¼; soybeans 1¼ higher to ¾ lower, August $2.63-63½.

Completions And New Locations Drop In Monroe Area Oil, Gas Last Week

Two indexes of activity in the Monroe Oil & Gas District registered modest declines last week, despite the fact that more rigs were actively drilling or testing than was the case a week before.

Manager Duncan S. Cook recorded but seven completions on new wells in four of the district's 15 parishes, as compared with 11 finals reported a week ago.

Down slightly also was the count on new locations staked during the week, 16 in five parishes, opposed to 18 last week. Two of them were in Ouachita Parish, the Monroe Gas and Chenniere Fields, while Union Parish's Monroe Gas Field had four.

Other new locations included five in Concordia Parish, two in LaSalle and three in Catahoula.

The week's finals were three in Concordia Parish, two in Tensas Parish and one each in Morehouse and Rapides Parishes.

Working wells showed a rise over the week, with final totals listing 25 rigs actively drilling or testing in eight northeast Louisiana parishes. The figure compared with 20 the week before.

Two were found in Ouachita Parish, both drilling. Others came in LaSalle Parish, which had eight, four in Rapides Parish, three each in Catahoula and Tensas Parishes, two each in Concordia and Richland and one in Lincoln Parish.

The week's activity also included the plugging and abandonment of 15 wells, though the tota on inactive sites fell from 81 to 80. Locations throughout the district numbered 93; 38 were listed as drilling locations.

A Look At The Lives Of Turncoats Behind Bamboo Curtain

(EDITOR'S NOTE — In August, 1953, the nation was shocked and saddened when 21 Americans, who were prisoners of war of the Communists in Korea, refused repatriation home from Red China. But in the past 10 years, 13 have left. What of the others? Where are they and what are they doing? On the 10th anniversary of their refusal to forsake their Communist captors, The Associated Press looks at their lives.)

By CHARLES WEST
Associated Press Staff Writer

Ten years ago today 21 American GIs, taken prisoner in the Korean War, rejected repatriation and remained with their Communist captors.

Seven stayed. One is dead.

Thirteen came back.

They came back, for the most part, to broken lives of despair and tragedy, inwardly retreating from each encounter with the words "turncoat" and "collaborator."

Some sought oblivion with alcohol. Others dropped out of sight, leaving the communities where a neighbor's casual glance was a compulsion to avert the eyes.

Only one, so far as can be learned, found a happy, fruitful life back in his native land. He is Richard Tenneson of Minneapolis. Even he conceded, "I know I can never completely live down what happened over there."

Tenneson made the remark four years ago, explaining: "It stings more than ever. I think it's because I can see the truth of it now, where before I tried in my own mind to defend myself against it."

Now, Tenneson, too, has taken refuge in anonymity. "He's a long way from the Twin Cities," his mother said, refusing to tell where. "He is doing very well where he is. He has made a good adjustment. I feel very good and happy about him now."

The difficult adjustment lies ahead for Lowell D. Skinner, the 13th turncoat to renounce the Communist life. He now is in Hong Kong, trying to raise passage to the United States where his elderly parents await him at a two-bedroom trailer at Portage Lakes, Ohio, near Akron.

"You expect to hear the news and hope for it all the time," said his father, Brady Skinner, who has counted the days of a decade for the son's homecoming.

"But when it finally comes, it is still a shock. It makes you tired and weak and happy."

Skinner, as other disillusioned turncoats before him, left Red China—and an ill Chinese wife—because of a lack of individual freedom and low living standards. He had asked permission to study, but was assigned to a factory job where he worked for nine years.

"I was given no choice," he said.

Skinner said other turncoats want to leave, and relatives in the United States said the same. Those still with the Communists are:

Morris R. Wills of Fort Ann, N.Y.; Albert C. Belhomme of Ashland, Pa.; William C. White of Plumerville, Ark.; Clarence C. Adams of Memphis, Tenn.; Scott L. Rush of Marietta, Ohio; Harold Webb of Fort Pierce, Fla.; and John R. Dunn of Baltimore.

Sgt. Rufus E. Douglas of Texon, Tex., died in China June 15, 1954.

In a letter to his father last Christmas, Wills wrote that he was happily married and never coming home. He had finished college and was writing articles and serving as a translator, said the father, who hears from his son once or twice a year.

Relatives of White, Adams, Rush and Webb said they had expressed desire to come back. Dunn's mother could not be located.

Webb's aunt said he wrote constantly of wanting to come home.

"I'd love to see him," she continued, "but if he's a Communist I don't think he should come back to this country."

Three times within the last year White's letters to his mother have expressed a longing to return and told of one unsuccessful effort to get transportation fare from the Red Cross. His mother said he had studied law and was graduated.

When she wrote him that she didn't understand why he stayed, White replied:

Rush's mother, who now lives in Tucson, Ariz., said he would like to leave China by October with his Chinese wife and their baby daughter, but needs $1,000 for transportation. He worked in a mill and his wife taught school. His mother said he wrote recently:

"I can prove I have no political affiliation in or out of China and am definitely not communistic in party, action or ideology."

Adams, too, has married a Chinese woman and they have one child. His mother said that in his latest letter, about a year ago, he wrote that he would like to come home, but implied that it might not be easy to get out of Red China.

Those who did get out, in addition to Tenneson and Skinner, are Richard Corden of East Providence, R.I.; Larance V. Sullivan of Omaha; Samuel D. Hawkins of Oklahoma City; William A. Cowart of Monticello, Ark.; Andrew Fortuna of Lincoln Park, Mich.; Aaron P. Wilson of Urania, La.; Otho Bell of Olympia, Wash.; Lewis Griggs of Jacksonville, Tex.; Edward Dickenson of Ashburn, Va.; Claude Batchelor of San Antonio, Tex.; and Arlie Howard Pate of Carbondale, Ill.

Corden, Cowart, Fortuna and Pate dropped out of sight.

Fortuna's half - sister said she had not heard from him since his return in 1957. "Where he's living or what he's doing, I don't know," she said. "I've always wondered what happened to him."

After a divorce from his Chinese-born Russian wife, Tanya, in 1962, Hawkins left Oklahoma City. His foster mother and grandmother believe he went to Los Angeles, but have not heard from him in some time.

Batchellor, who remarried after divorcing the Japanese wife who refused to join him in the United States, left his accounting clerk's job in San Antonio six months ago, leaving no forwarding address.

Griggs attended Stephen F. Austin State College in Nacogdoches, Tex. Residents of his home town said they haven't seen him since about the time of his scheduled graduation in 1959.

Sullivan was discharged from the Napa State Hospital in California last May 15, after his third confinement there. A judge sent him to a rehabilitation center for alcoholics in February, 1962, but he stayed only a few days.

Bell, the first turncoat to come back, also had trouble with alcohol. For a time he was in and out of jail for scrapes he blamed on drinking. His wife said their three children were subjected to taunts whenever his name appears in print, but the harassment soon died down.

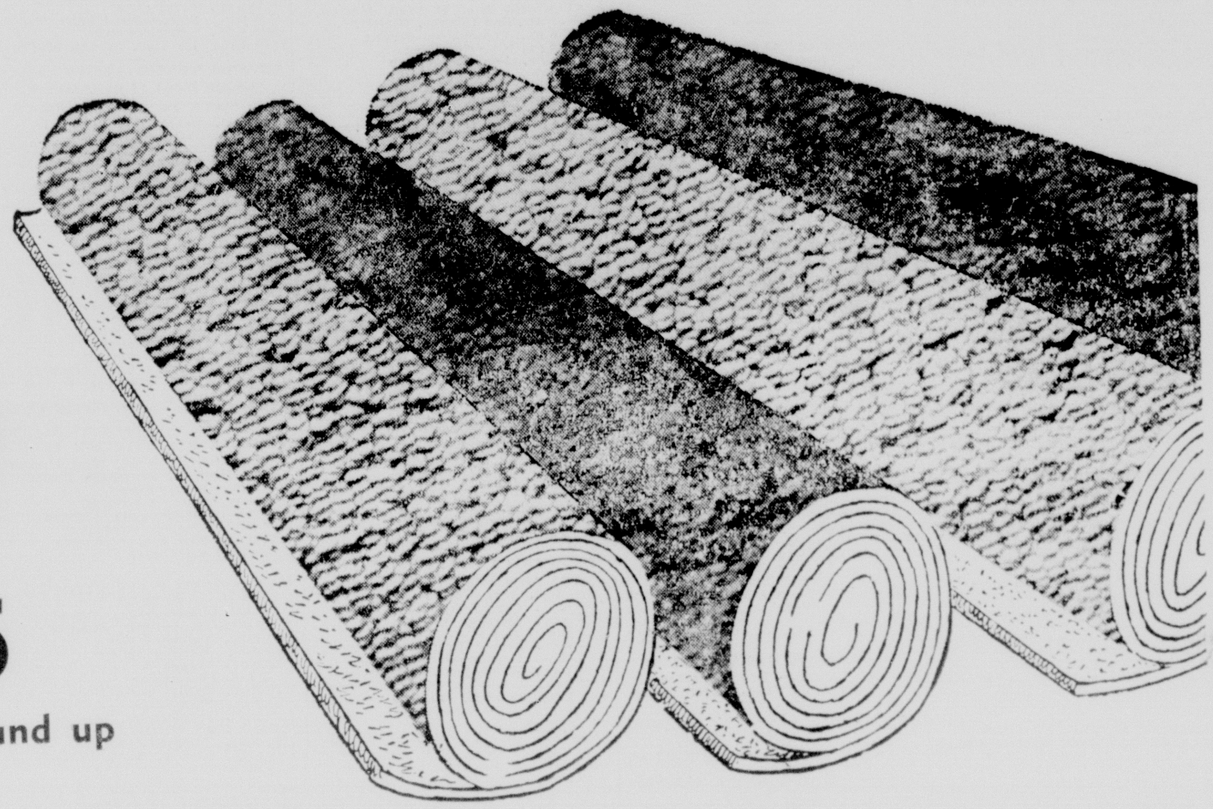

Bell, who has worked as a fruit picker and packer, was laid off his job with a Christmas tree firm about two weeks ago and is on relief. Hehad been working steadily there while trying to buy a home in a small community five miles east of Olympia, Wash.

Dickenson, too, is presently out of work. Until a month ago he had been a laborer for a construction firm in Cracker's Neck, in the economically depressed, hilly section of southwest Virginia.

The former corporal, who served 3½ years at hard labor for informing on fellow prisoners in Korea, married a local girl and has four children. There appears to be no resentment of Dickenson in Cracker's Neck.

Ordeal at Dawn

By CONRAD FINK

In Japan, where missionaries have accelerated the preaching of Christianity, there still are many persons who seek peace of mind through the rituals and teachings of Zen Buddhism, which speaks of conquering self and becoming the center of the universe, but offers no hope of Salvation.

KAMAKURA, Japan (AP)—The ordeal begins before the morning sun burns away the predawn mists clinging to the green hills above Zuiroku Valley.

Deep in the valley, amid the inner shadows of Engaku Temple, a Zen Buddhist priest, lantern light glistening in reflection on his shaven head, pads barefoot between rows of Japanese stiffly seated crosslegged on straw mats.

Suddenly, a youth quivers with the agony of sitting motionless for hours. The priest, his face impassively rigid, turns to the youth and bows. The youth bows back.

The priest then lifts an oak stave four feet long and begins beating the exhausted young man across the back.

"Smack, smack." The sound whips through the temple.

This is the road to enlightenment as traveled in Engaku Temple and in Zen temples throughout this island nation where thousands of Japanese seek to rise above their everyday world and achieve spiritual release through rigorous physical and mental trials.

VAGUE ANSWER

What they seek is not understood easily by Westerners, whose culture and language deal in absolutes—alien to Zen Buddhism.

"Who is your God? Where does he exist?" Westerners ask.

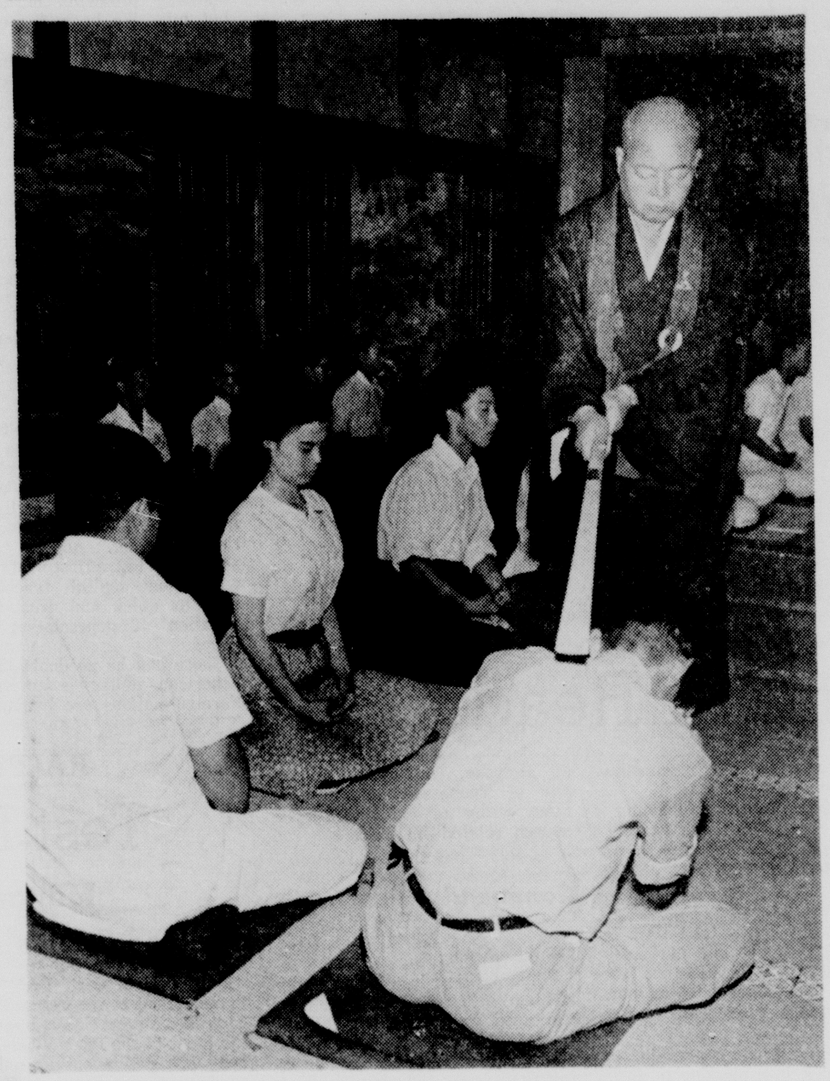

The Zen Buddhists' answer often is greeted with puzzled silence or laughter and chalked up as merely more evidence of just how inscrutable the Orient supposedly is.

For Zen Buddhists deal in the indefinite and speak of no God nor of a physical heaven. They speak of "conquering the self and becoming the equivalent of a stone by the roadside, or a cow, perhaps, and thus becoming the center of the universe."

The net result for many Japanese, however, is simple: peace of mind.

This sounds wonderful to thousands who feel all the stresses and strains of living in Japan's fast-moving, industrialized society. They flock to the moss-covered buildings of Engaku Temple and its high wooden gates 35 miles south of Tokyo.

The Japanese, young and old, arrive in buses, trains, automobiles and on motorcycles. Some trudge miles along dusty roads leading to the temple.

AFTER EXCHANGING bows with the Zen Buddhist before him, the chief priest beats him with his oak stave in the main hall of Engaku Temple in Kamakura, Japan. The beaten man had moved slightly from the rigid cross-legged position in which young and old sit for two hours before breakfast during several days of Zen meditation at the temple, one of the many to which laymen come. The movement indicated lack of concentration on spiritual thoughts. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

VARIED GROUPS

They are the gum-chewing bobbysoxers of new Japan, dressed in sweaters and slacks; they are the withered oldsters of old Japan, wearing kimono and wooden sandals.

Zen Buddhism claims more than 4.5 million members but relatively few boast of having received the spirit of Buddhism or experiencing the enlightenment and peace of mind they claim Buddha possessed.

Zen Buddhists say this comes to only a lucky few in a flash of inspiration, often after years or a lifetime of silent contemplation.

What many visitors seek at Engaku Temple, therefore, is a few days of quiet among the towering trees of Zuiroku Valley and, if possible, a spiritual transfusion.

They accept—and sometimes request—the oak stave across their backs to clear their minds and make concentration easier.

Some visitors have little or nothing to say about being put under the care of priests who wield a mean stick. Fathers send their errant sons; overwhelmingly paternalistic industry sends its employes to get the cobwebs shaken out of their brains.

ARISE EARLY

By 5 a.m., all 82 shivering students had arisen from their thin, hard sleeping mats and were assembled in the temple's cavernous main hall.

Without any breakfast, the 82 sat in long rows, legs cruelly crossed and hands folded in laps in the Buddhist fashion followed with small variations throughout Asia, from India, land of Buddha, north to Japan.

A barefoot priest, dressed in long, flowing white robes, entered and twice clapped together two small blocks of wood. Backs stiffened, legs and arms were adjusted.

Then entered the chief priest, Ryoko Kingaku, a six-footer, carrying his oak stave. He bent and slammed the stave on the straw matting several times to announce his arrival and warn that he was watching.

DOORS OPENED

Two small sliding doors at the back of the temple were opened so the rigid, meditating youths could watch the sun's first rays hit the greenclad mountainside.

Despite the predawn chill, beads of perspiration began breaking out on the students' faces. Nobody moved and for 10 minutes the wary priest walked his sentry duty uninterrupted, oak stave on his shoulder like a rifle.

Then he stopped and bowed. A youth had moved. Not much, but enough to indicate to the chief priest that he was not concentrating.

"Smack, smack."

BEATING REQUESTED

The young priest had asked for the beating to bring his mind back from its wanderings. The chief priest had obliged.

The oak stave was wielded more and more frequently as time droned on. After an hour, several young students, who had just begun traveling the road to enlightenment, were permitted to go outside and flex their aching legs.

After a second hour, many priests moved into the hall and began beating a wooden drum. A small bell tinkled somewhere. A low chant, the "Han-Nya-Shin-Kyo"—genuine scripture of wisdom personified—rose and students slowly joined in. The drum beat quickened.

ORDEAL OVER

The ordeal was over.

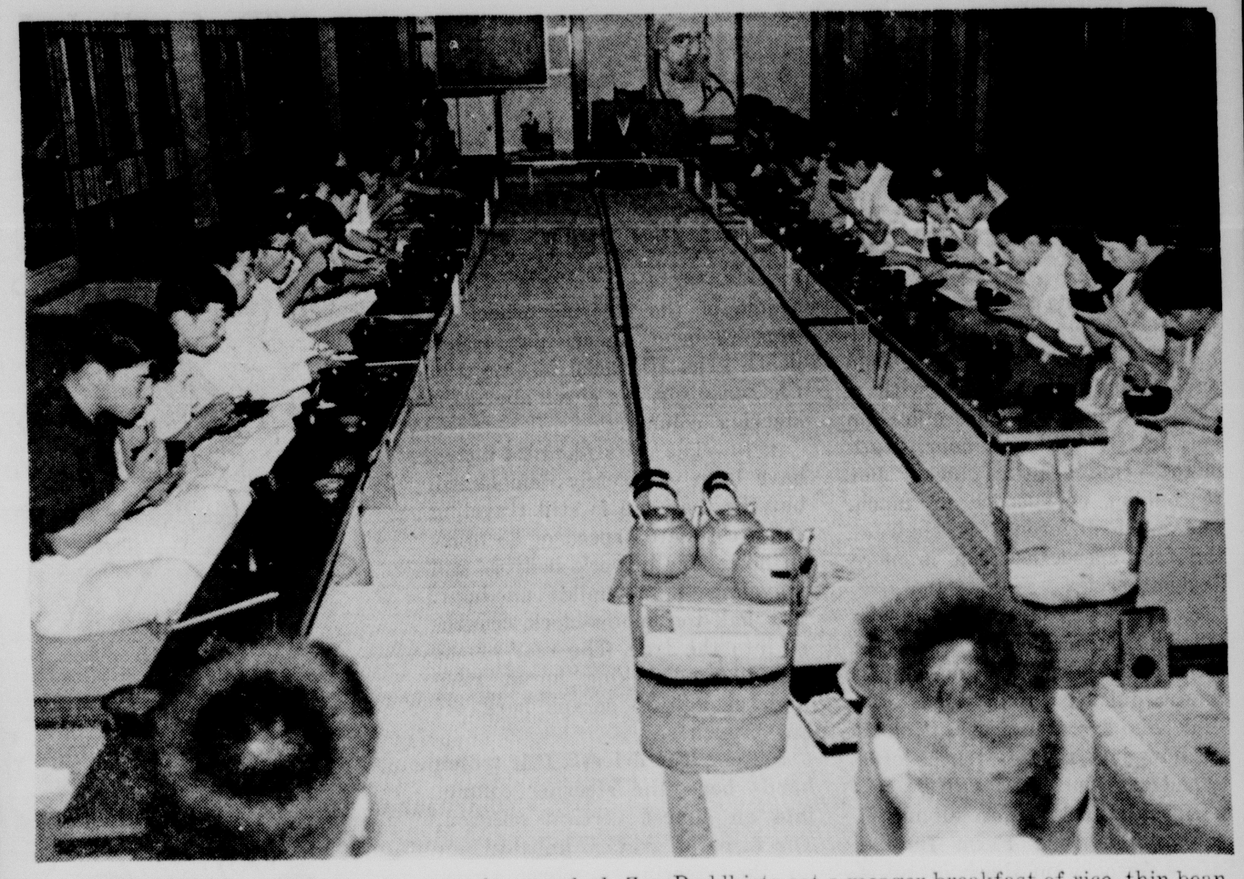

Breakfast followed—a small bowl of rice, a cup of thin bean soup, and a cup of green tea.

As Engaku Temple's abbot, Sogen Asahina, told his students in a lecture after breakfast: "You come to disregard your 'self.'"

"Satori (understanding) lies everywhere," he said in his low, scholarly voice. "You think it is difficult because you don't know where it is.

"We understand Buddha's understanding through our own experience. Then we are all Buddhas."

Not a trace of a smile flicked across his face but he ended on a friendly note: "But, whether you attain understanding or not, you still are Buddhas."

AFTER SITTING motionless in a two-hour ordeal, Zen Buddhists eat a meager breakfast of rice, thin bean soup and tea at Engaku Temple at Kamakura, Japan. They are spending several days in meditation and physical and mental discipline under instruction of priest. The students include volunteers and also errant sons sent by fathers, and employes sent by Japan's paternalistic industries. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

Mailing Lists Come From A Variety Of Sources

By ROGER LANE

When you find your mailbox full of material other than letters, you wonder how your name keeps getting on mailing lists. There are a thousand ways, some quite surprising.

NEW YORK (AP) — "Where did you get MY name?" you wonder, sifting out the sales pitches and fund solicitations from the mail.

If you just had a baby, the fact went into various records. Almost before the print was dry, an agent for a compiler of mailing lists had it.

If you contributed $100 to a political campaign, your name was plucked off the candidate's required report to Congress and went on a list.

And so with registering your car, buying a house or boat, ordering shrubs or a knicknack by mail, passing the bar exam, subscribing to a magazine or even having a death in the family.

"Quite frankly," said a solicitation for a magazine subscription, "your education and income set you apart from the general population . . ."

Pure flattery?

Harvard's alumni directory wraps about 70,000 names into a ready-made package, Cornell's 50,000.

GROWING FIELD

More than 200 companies crowd the growing field in the $2 billion a year direct-mail selling and soliciting industry, counting printing, postage, payroll and other costs.

"Lists we supplied last year totaled probably well over 50 million names," said Hugo Dunhill, president of Dunhill International List Co., a 35-year old concern but by no means the biggest.

Like most of its rivals, Dunhill does the stenographic and clerical work in getting out a mailing for a client.

Much of the raw material for lists comes from public records, rosters of men and women licensed to practice a profession or trade, hunt, fish, drive a car, get married, own a dog, add a room to a house, sell insurance and the like.

MUCH MORE

Much more comes from circulation, sales and a wide variety of membership lists, usually for a fee.

The Diners' Club peddles the names of member credit cardholders. So does American Express. The American Medical Association reportedly gets $2 a thousand for doctors' names.

Much of the raw information has been available for decades. What is comparatively new is highly systematized collection of it, and aggressive merchandising.

O. E. McIntyre Co. of Westbury, N. Y., offers the names of the 80 per cent of American householders with telephone service—data well-publicized piecemeal but awkward to gather.

The Reuben H. Donnelley Corp. of Chicago concentrates mainly on the auto registrations with a yield of seven million names annually. There are many other specializing firms.

ESTIMATES MADE

Some estimate that one of every three letters going into the American mailbox is an advertising circular directed there by a name-finding concern. Only bills are more numerous, they say.

Hugo Dunhill contends the services of his and rival companies are an "absolute necessity."

"Every magazine would be out of business without direct mail," Dunhill said. "Most of the nations fund - raising efforts would be crippled."

"Ask 20 people and they'll say they throw these letters into the wastebasket without opening them. Don't believe them. They don't want to admit they read them."

Dunhill, whose catalog runs 100 pages including cross-references, says mailing lists range in length from a few score to 30 million names.

The longest enumerates the nation's property owners. So far there has been no market for it.

One of the shortest, a select compilation that fetches $1 per name, is a 1,500-item roster of corporation pension and welfare funds with assets of over $1 million, together with names of administrators.

Split-Second Death

Few drivers, as they breeze merrily along the highway, realize that death can be less than one second away, even with a car traveling only 55 miles an hour. At 85 miles an hour, death might come a little quicker but it couldn't be speeded up much. The main difference is that, at the fast speed, a crash is more likely to occur.

Even the good driver can be killed in an accident if he is not careful and alert. It can happen almost quicker than one can blink his eye. To prove it, let's see how just seven - tenths of a second can snuff out a life.

Official time figures submitted by the Louisiana Farm Bureau Safety Association show, in 10ths of a second, what happens when an automobile crashes into a solid, immovable tree. Here are the figures:

1/10 OF A SECOND—The front bumper and chrome "frosting" of the grillwork collapse. Slivers of steel penetrate the tree to depths of one and a half inches and more.

2/10—The hood crumples as it rises, smashing into the windshield. Spinning rear wheels leave the ground. The grillwork disintegrates. The fenders come into contact with the tree, forcing the rear parts to splay out over the front doors.

In the same second tenth of a second, the heavy structural members of the car begin to act as a brake on the terrific forward momentum of the 2½-ton body. But the driver's body continues to move forward at the vehicle's original speed. This means a force of 20 times gravity; his body weighs 3,200 pounds. His legs, ramrod - straight, snap at the knee joints.

3/10—The driver's body is still on the seat, torso upright, broken knees pressing against the dashboard. The plastic - and - steel frame of the steering wheel begins to bend under his terrible death grip. His head is now near the sun visor, his chest above the steering column.

4/10—The car's front 24 inches have been completely demolished, but the rear end is still traveling at an estimated speed of 35 miles an hour. The driver's body is still traveling at 55 miles an hour. The half-ton motor-block crunches into the trde. The rear of the car, like a bucking horse, rises high enough to scrape bark off low branches.

5/10 — The driver's fear-frozen hands bend the steering column into an almost vertical position. The force of gravity impales him on the steering - wheel shaft. Jagged steel pierces lung and intercostal arteries.

6/10 — So great is the force of the impact that the driver's feet are ripped from his tightly laced shoes. The brake shears off at the floor - boards. The chassis bends in the middle. The driver's head smashes into the windshield. The rear of the car begins its downward fall, spinning wheels dragging the ground.

7/10—The entire writhing body of the car is forced out of shape. In one last convulsion, the seat rams forward, pinning the driver against the cruel steel of the steering shaft. Shock has frozen his heart. He is now dead.

Elapsed time — seven tenths of a second.

Any driver who finds himself nodding, falling asleep, waking up and nodding again is inviting just such an accident for himself. He may be less than a second from death if his car hits another vehicle or a tree or crashes into a ditch where the stop is instantaneous. Even drivers who take less serious chances may face the same fate if they fail to be alert or drive so fast they lose control of the car.

Fourth Rail Alternative

Four possible alternatives have been suggested in the nation's great railroad dilemma in which an economy -- crippling strike is threatened. If we find difficulty in saying the course chosen by President Kennedy is the proper one, we might find greater difficulty in saying the same thing of any of the other alternatives.

The employes and the railroads, the latter backed by a supreme court decision and apparently at least by presidential acquiescence, seem to have reached an unscalable barrier to agreement.

As Kennedy said in his address some time ago, he appears to be trying to steer a middle path between two grim alternatives. On the one hand, we face the probability of a nationwide rail strike that would put an impossible burden on our economy and wreck the current upswing. On the other hand, to prevent this from happening, the president suggested government seizure of the railroads.

Both of these courses seem intolerable and therefore make some other alternative, although unpalatable in itself, seem more desirable.

As a third alternative, Kennedy could have asked congress to enact legislation providing for compulsory arbitration to resolve conflicts between the railroad management and the operating unions. Conflicts over work - rules changes have led the collective bargaining process into a quagmire.

The president sought still another avenue in approaching this problem. He is asking the railroad management and the unions to maintain the status quo while congress turns the dispute over to the interstate commerce commission. It is hoped that over the next two years the commission will find a solution to both sides, or at least acceptable without a shutdown of the rail lines by strike or otherwise.

There is an element of compulsion in this proposal, just as there is in the other two which propose to prevent the strike by government action.

Most of the trouble in the present situation can be traced to the acquisition of too much power by the labor unions, with government support in previous administrations, as well as in this one. Because of this excessive power, the union has been able to make the railroads continue in forced make - work practices which should have been abandoned long ago.

Because of these fictitious jobs, the railroads have not been able to expand and create legitimate jobs as they should have done. There is every likelihood that if the make-work jobs had been abandoned, railroad expansion, on a gradual basis, would have provided at least an equal number of good, legitimate jobs. If that had been done, it is safe to say that neither the railroads nor the employes would now be facing the crisis which confronts them.

The United States supreme court upheld the right of the railroads to discontinue useless jobs but this left the unions faced with the loss of thousands of jobs and resulting unemployment for their members.

As things now stand, it looks as if the president's proposal to let the interstate commerce commission attempt to arbitrate the dispute may be the least of the several evils with which we could be confronted. At least it might give the impending strike time enough to wear itself out as adjustments are made.

Piggyback, or truck-trailer-on-flatcar traffic this year is running 14 per cent above that of 1962 and double the 1959 level. Railroad officials estimate more than two million truck-trailer loads will move by rail during 1963.

Backing Goldwater

Winnsboro, La.

To The Editor:

On our recent vacation to Washington, D. C., I read numerous editorials on civil rights. We only found the Washington Post in favor of the Kennedy clan. If the election were now I believe Goldwater would be our next president. Keep up your good work. Maybe it will be the same next year.

Losing U.S. Privileges

Rayville, La.

To the Editor:

The method in which our Supreme Court and federal government are functioning today shows clearly that American privileges are steadily being whittled away.

It shows that communists have a strong influence on our Supreme Court and heavily influence the executive and justice departments of our government. If this were not true, how is it that these government branches follow exactly the pattern for world conquest set by the Kremlin?

The arbitrary ruling of the Supreme Court barring the reading of the Lord's prayer in public schools is one of the latest examples of approaching socialism.

In the U. S. S. R., it has been continuously argued that atheism is desirable over any religion. How is the fact that we seem to be following Russia going to be explained to countries that don't restrict religious worship?

Since the rights of children to worship their Creator in public schools have been removed, we should wonder what privilege will go next. Perhaps it will be freedom of speech and the press.

President Kennedy's "socialist fraud," the Medicare Bill, his eagerness to give away millions of dollars to friendly and hostile countries alike, his readiness to discard the Monroe Doctrine and yield to the demands of Premier Krushchev, allowing him to prepare a large base of operations within a few miles of our shores and now, his willingness and even demands that individuals surrender their constitutional rights to say whom they will serve in their businesses, clearly reveal his ultimate goal. National Socialism.

The anti-discrimination laws that President Kennedy proposed to Congress would give the federal government power over private property and individual freedom of choice that is comparable only with that exercised in time of war and Southern Reconstruction.

Possibly the time has come for our Congress to enact a law whereby our nation elects a President for only one term every four or six years. Then maybe our leader could be a fair and dignified President instead of a frantic politician running for re-election as soon as he takes his hand off the Bible.

I am completely outdone with people who are unconcerned with the serious problems that face every American. While not a few citizens are sitting by, disinterested or unaware, politicians are pushing the U. S. to the brink of socialism.

Voting is everyone's duty. The way to change a government with which you are dissatisfied is to register to vote, and vote. All the complaining and discontent will not alter the situation.

Once we had a government of the people, by the people, and for the people, and we should have it now. We can reclaim that government by voicing our opinions and voting in the future for candidates who believe in constitutional government.

Spiritual Blessings

To the Editor:

How many of us take time to count or to appreciate our spiritual blessings? We take it for granted that God should give us these blessings without any thanks at all.

God gives us the strength to work and it is a blessing to do it in a country like U. S. A. and not under a communist ruler like they have in Russia and China.

He gives us, too, a blessing as a nation the right to express our views either through the press, radio or T. V.

We, as a free nation, can congregate or visit our neighbors and friends without fear from the law.

Living in the U. S., we can worship as we see fit and be in the house of God and can express our views without being criticized or condemned.

Being in a country that was made by God's wonderful power, we can mingle with all and learn from other people their ideas and ways of life.

This country is great through the Almighty, in living in a democratic country and not to tell you what you should wear, what you should eat, how much you can grow or how much money you can make.

Another thing we should be proud of in U. S. and a Holy God, is that we can have all the good things in life to be happy are: A nice family, lots of nourishing food, better health, more happiness and love.

The last thing as a spiritual blessing is by having a great God up in Heaven, He can give to all of His children the richness he possesses in His house up above.

Seven Seas University

To the Editor:

Noticing the query of a reader of your excellent and informative feature, "Mr. Editor . . . Tell Me, Please," for information concerning the University of the Seven Seas, I am passing on additional information for the benefit of other readers desiring knowledge of this new dimension in education.

I am able to furnish this data because I have a close friend who will be one of the 40 professors who will staff this new university which will be housed aboard a luxury liner traveling around the world each term.

Planned for nearly four years, this international institution starts its first semester October 22. Leaving New York, it will stop at 22 ports in Spain, Portugal, Italy, the French Riviera, Lebanon, Egypt, India, Japan, Hong Kong, Singapore, and Hawaii, terminating the voyage at San Diego, California.

The second semester, beginnig in February, it will concentrate on the ports of southeast Asia, Africa, and return to New York via Latin America.

A unique feature of the university will be its strong influence in bringing together students of many lands and helping them to learn more of the culture they represent as they observe new nations first hand.

My friend, a native of Maryland, who now is a resident of Greenville, North Carolina, will teach courses in World Religions and philosophy and will also serve as a counselor. Her background for this new venture includes a Goucher College baccalaurette, Masters degree from Mt. Holyoke College, teaching at Hood College, Mt. Holyoke, University, University of Tennessee, along with many years of teaching special church related institutes.

Commends Paper

Farmerville, La.

To the Editor:

While visiting in your fair city of Monroe just recently I want to commend your paper for the excellent news coverage your paper offer to your readers. Your news coverage wears a badge of ethics of fairness and is contents seem to be assembled for all levels of reading interest. Your sports pages for an old duffer like me who likes to fish was my constant 'tourist guide'. Keep up the good work.

I am retired and just touring this great land of ours. Your community has a great appeal with so many wildlife enthusiasts and resources to enjoy outdoor living. I was most impressed with the apparent prosperity your residential areas showed and the pride that home owners seem to take in their surroundings. However, I regret to say from the appearance of your thorough-fares entering your downtown area, they must not be owned by these same homeowners. I just left a city (Philedelphia) where your problem of discarded household appliances and worn out cars, etc. were just a part of the general slum area and they DID something about this problem. It would seem with the many visitors the city of Monroe must have and the tourist trade your community is seeking by planting Tulips, that the first concern would be to remove or screen this saleable trash.

While we are on the subject of trash I wonder just what are homeowners allowed to do with theirs that needs burning? What does the City of Monroe do with collected garbage and trash? My reason for aking these questions is that I had a severe case of asthma while visiting in one of your motels and I was told all the smog came from burning trash at the city dump. Do I understand your city is better than 80,000 population and that you are just getting around to sewerage disposal and that you burn trash at the city dump in practically the center of your city?

Even though I thought I was choking to death by your smog aggrevating my asthma your fishing was most rewarding and so convenient to your motels. The prosperity and pride of your residential areas should be matched by your downtown areas and as a visitor passing through I am not critical other than to show your community how it looks to others. Your community could be the 'Sportsmans Paradise' after you screen and clean-and a word of caution-don't choke those free spenders (tourists) to death, before they get a chance to spend some money in your community, by burning city garbage and trash. By the way don't the ladies' try to improve and clean-up? They do on the eastern seaboard?

Emmitt Hill

P.S. I will be back your way to do more fishing looking forward to getting reacquainted with your paper.

Reading Headlines

West Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

As a matter of habit, most of us are prone to read the headlines on page one of our daily newspaper and skim over the articles of news in the interior of the paper, which usually contain the pulse of the news. Thursdays paper was a good example of this. On page one Castro Expropriates Multi Million Dollar Embassy Building in Havana. From the smaller news articles in the interior we learn that Russia continues their massive build up of troops and weapons in Cuba, that the Pentagon releases figures on the cost of enrolling one Negro in the University of Mississippi as being $4,364,000 plus $559,000 cost to the Justice Department for their part in the enrollment (all TAX dollars). We also learn that our President speaks to a group of boys "senators" attending the Annual Boys Nation, and tells them, that they, in some ways show more initiative than our country's governors. Suggestion — Read your newspaper more thoroughly and remember what you read come November 1964.

How Do You Stand, Sir?

By BARRY GOLDWATER

U.S. Senator From Arizona

PRESIDENT KENNEDY was fond of quoting on old Chinese proverb during his campaign in 1960. It went like this: "There is much noise on the stairs, but nothing comes through the door."

Candidate Kennedy, of course, applied the proverb to the Republican Eisenhower administration which he repeatedly accused of non-action in the field of government policy.

But today it is difficult to hit on a more apt description of the New Frontier than the one Mr. Kennedy formerly used against the Eisenhower administration. For any way you slice it, this is a "do-nothing" administration.

It does nothing about the outstanding problems of the day, but talk. We hear, for example, that a Sovietized Cuba is intolerable and that we cannot coexist with it. This is certainly "noise on the stairs," because we have been hearing it for months and nothing is done to bring a solution "through the door."

In another area, the President has officially recognized the dangerous balance of payments problem. He has proposed numerous gimmicks to correct the imbalance in a special message to Congress. This also is "noise on the stair," because the President appears adamantly opposed to bringing a proper solution "through the door."

WHAT IS REALLY NEEDED to shore up the Amercian dollar, to ease the balance of payments problem and to halt the out-flow of gold is a program of fiscal integrity pegged to a balanced national budget. Added to this should be tax adjustments which will spur capital investments, such as quick and drastic liberalization of depreciation allowances.

There can be no doubt that the American dollar is in trouble. Foreign nations are beginning to worry about the free-handed deficit spending policies of the New Frontier. They can see no substantive effort on the part of the U.S. officials to bring government spending in line with government income. They have a suspicion as deep as that of the American people that the administration's deliberate policy of piling one deficit on top of another will lead to a really serious trouble.

JUST HOW DEEP THE administration's currency problems are can be seen today in increased speculation about a possible devaluation of the dollar. The government denies any such likelihood, and I am sure action of this type will never be taken until circumstance make it unavoidable. But the mere fact that the possibility is becoming a subject for discussion by competent economists as well as by some national magazines is indicative of an underlying fear at the gravity of the dollar problem.

Despite the threat and its increasing seriousness, the administration steadfastly holds out for more and more government spending as well as a sizable tax cut. Danger signs do nothing for the New Frontier but spur a search for some kind of quick panacea. It never seems to occur to the administration that the problem requires a reversal of its big spending policy both at home and abroad.

This is perfectly obvious to almost everyone except those who have committed the New Frontier to a program of recurring deficits. They can't go back on this line without serious embarrassment, because they made heavy propaganda efforts to sell it to the American people as an economic necessity.

But the welfare of the dollar is more important to the American people than a few red faces around the White House.

Ho do you stand, sir?

Test-Ban Jitters

Military Men's Faces Fixed Smiles Automatically On Top

WHEN THE TEST BAN treaty is mentioned at the Pentagon, fixed smiles automatically appear on the faces of the top military men. They are just about as unhappy as they can be about it. But the President has made it clear that he will brook no opposition. So far, the Joint Chiefs of Staff have not been given the order direct to say they approve of the treaty. But the White House has told them in no uncertain terms to say that they "accept" it.

On Capitol Hill, there has been much scurrying about in the upper senatorial echelons as Republicans and some Democrats seek a formula which will permit them to speak their minds truthfully on the treaty without courting trouble at the polls. At every turn, there are wild hopes that Chairman Richard Russell of the Senate Armed Services Committee, one of the most highly respected members of the upper house, will lead an effective opposition. But no one really believes that he will.

Along Embassy Row, the password is "watch and wait," but there is almost no hope that one -third-plus-one of the Senate will cast votes against the test ban treaty. Their governments, in some cases, support the Kennedy-Khrushchev's love feast—and diplomats must always seem to be disengaged. But private comments are hardly diplomatic.

The general concern is not in the treaty itself, although they can make a case against it, but in what it implies, what impression it will make behind the Iron Curtain and among the neutralist nations, and where it is leading the United States.

The scientists and the military will offer technical arguments on the possibility of a test ban with genuine safeguards — if they are permitted to do so by the Administration and by the chairman of the interested Senate committees. But in the overall picture, this may be secondary. The fact that the United States has strolled into the garden with the Soviet Union will cause some bitterness among our allies who have been told by us to stand strong against the Kremlin.

THESE ALLIES, AND the neutralists as well, will now argue that the U. S. has thrown them to the wolves in favor of a partnership with the Soviets. The Iron Curtain countries, already embittered by President Kennedy's increasing reluctance to honor Captive Nations Week, will be convinced that their aspirations for liberation have been jettisoned by the Administration. Henceforth, they will assume that we no longer care about them.

Undersecretary W. Averell Harriman has implied in so many words that to think in terms of the eventual overthrow of Communist tyranny in East Europe is impractical, that we must reconcile ourselves to perpetual Soviet hegemony over the captive nations. With this, he has deprived the free world of a formidable ally in the persons of the people of the captive nations. For them, there is no longer any hope, or any good reason for struggling against the Communist tyrants.

Far more dangerous to the system of alliances created by Presidents Truman and Eisenhower is Secretary of State Dean Rusk's hint that the United States, Britain, and the Soviet Union might negotiate a non-agression pact. For those of us who remember the Kremlin's idea of "non-aggression" and how it dishonored similar treaties with the Baltic States (invaded and absorbed, their populations massed-shipped to Siberia) — or Adolf Hitler's definition in the days before World War II — the term sends shivers up and down the spine.

BUT EVEN IF THE Kremlin is ready to honor its own word, any "non - aggression" treaty means that the United States must promise to sit idly by while Soviet expansionism, now at midtide in Cuba, sweeps over the rest of Latin America. Once Comrade Khrushchev has our signatures on a "non - aggression" pact, he will wave the scrap of paper under our noses every time we seem about to come to the defense of freedom in Asia, Africa, or the Western Hemisphere.

"And Moses said, the people, among whom I am, are six hundred thousand footmen; and thou hast said, I will give them flesh, that they may eat a whole month . . . and the Lord said thou shalt see now whether my word shall come to pass unto thee or not." Numbers 11:21, 23.

It is not difficult for God to keep His word with one or a million. Whether it is to save us from our sins or to save us from ourselves. "Thy word is truth."

ADVICE AND CONSENT

AS DUST SETTLED around the test ban treaty last week, President Kennedy expressed confidence the Senate would give its "advice and consent" toward ratifying the agreement. The certainty comes after earlier reports from GOP Senate leaders Everett Dirksen, R-Ill. and Burke Hickenlooper, R-Iowa who said in separate interviews they would not make a trip to Moscow as members of a bipartisan delegation where Secretary of State Dean Rusk, British Foreign Minister Lord Home and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko will initial the pact Monday.

Both GOP Senators also left it open as to how they might vote on the treaty. But two GOP members, Sens. Leverett Saltonstall, R-Mass. and George Aiken, R-Vt., left with senatorial delegates J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., Hubert Humphries, D-Minn. and John O. Pastore, D-R.I., Friday night to form the bipartisan delegation.

MEANWHILE, President Kennedy issued two other important statements concerning the test ban agreement: (1) to test underground, (2) to class France as a major nuclear power.

Under the classification as a nuclear power, France would be entitled to classified information and equipment from the United States under terms of an Atomic Energy Act. This would create an opening for the United States to trade President de Gaulle nuclear weapons and know-how for a signature on the test ban treaty. Earlier in the week, President de Gaulle in a press conference had said France would not sign the Moscow agreement, but emphasized that despite differences no split between France and the United States was imminent.

REP. PHILLION

NUCLEAR EXPLOSIONS were not the only blast occurring during Harriman's briefings to solons concerning the treaty last week. When Rep. John R. Phillion, R-N.Y. reportedly asked Harriman a question implying the treaty would play into Soviet Premier Khrushchev's "blueprint" for world domination and asking what concessions the Undersecretary of State got in return, Harriman flew into what was described as a "screaming fuss."

DURING THE WEEK Harriman pointed out that the treaty was an effort to explore areas of agreement with the Soviets to lessen chances of armed conflict, but he cautioned the U.S. aim of a world of free choice and the Communist goal of domination still remain irreconcilable.

Harriman was able to shed a half light as to the full reasons for Soviet motivations in signing the pact which called for reversing positions and accepting a treaty they had previously rejected. The undersecretary who spent two weeks in Moscow and had long conversations with Khrushchev and other Kremlin leaders at one point reported that Khrushchev "for some reason" is anxious to secure an East-West non aggression pact. But, though other hidden factors may be involved, the chief reason stood out clearly.—Red China.

HARRIMAN

The great preoccupation of Soviet leadership now "is this challenge of Peking in the Communist movement," Harriman said. "I think Mr. Khrushchev wanted to show the Chinese that his policy of coexistence could produce results," he surmised.

RED CHINESE

SO FAR THE TWO outstanding drawbacks to success of the test ban treaty remain France and Red China. The United States believes through either pressure or aid with nuclear knowledge and weaponry France can be brought into the fold.

AMONG MAJOR plans for the test ban, the chief intention is to stop or hamper Red China's development of the A-bomb. According to Asst. Secretary of State Roger Hilsman, Communist China might be able to explode a nuclear device this year, but declared it would not alter the power balance in Asia "for a long, long time to come, if ever."

A single atomic device could be put together however, but only at the expense of scraping together every ounce of fissionable material the Red Chinese could put together which "would probably set back their nuclear weapons program as a whole," Hilsman said. Although a Red Chinese nuclear explosion might come, Hilsman said, "I wouldn't place too much significance on the explosion. . . ." The Red Chinese would do everything to make the most of the first nuclear blast both psychologicaly and politically. But Hilsman said it still would take a considerable amount of time to achieve a meaningful stockpile and delivery system.

THE TEST BAN is designed to place pressures on Red China while the Communist Chinese are in stages of developing the weapon. Since Red China would certainly test without the ban and probably will with it, the treaty is intended to destroy the Communist Chinese pretenses at maintaining a peace-loving image, hampering relations.

RED CHINA retaliated angrily this past week denouncing the treaty as a "dirty fraud." In a counter to the treaty, the Red Chinese demanded that all military bases on foreign soil be dismantled and that the entire world be made a nuclear-free zone. They also proposed as a step toward the elimination of nuclear weapons, an end to the exporting and importing of nuclear weapons or technical data for their manufacture. A step aimed directly at undermining a test ban solution with France.

Tensions also flared anew in Asian trouble spots as a likely relation of the Soviet-Chinese ideological dispute. In the demilitarized zone of Korea four North Koreans were killed after three U.S. soldiers and a South Korean policeman were ambushed and killed this past week.

Eight other North Korean infiltrators had been killed in July prior to the week's clashes, South Korean Defense Minister Lt. Gen. Kim Sun Eun said. He reported, however, there were no intelligence indications that the North Koreans and their Chinese backers were preparing to start another war.

After a "shoot to kill" U.S. Army patrol had flushed and killed four North Koreans, a ballistics test on the weapons, showed the same weapons were those used by the ambushers, pointing to a small number of infiltrators who slipped across the DMZ into South Korea.

Trouble also broke out with renewed fighting in South Viet Nam. India expressed concern to Communist China over deployment of Chinese troops in Tibet on India's northern border. Meanwhile, it was reported the Soviet Union offered India guided missiles which could be used in event of renewed aggression by Communist China.

RED CHINA also was forced to seek high-grade aviation fuel from another country, apparently to close the gap caused by drastic reduction of trade with the Soviet Union. Japan was approached, but a Japanese spokesman indicated that no deal will be approved. High quality aviation fuel is on the free world's list of strategic goods not to be sold to Communist nations.

The war of words continued between Red China and Russia. Communist China charged the Soviet Union "maliciously lumped" Peking with a "handful of outspoken atomic maniacs." The charge was in reply to an Izvestia article referring to the Red Chinese as "joining their voices to the yells of those very wild men who are afraid that the world will be saved from the threat of a thermonuclear conflict and mankind will receive the stable peace it desires so much." A Red Chinese reply said the Izvestia article "wantonly distorted" China's position on the test ban agreement. However, despite the strained relations Russia is expected to put in a plug for Red China's admission into the United Nations.

DISARMAMENT DISCUSSIONS between the United States and Soviet Diplomats were recessed in mid-week to await the foreign ministers meeting in Moscow this coming week following initialing of the test ban treaty. The three Ministers, Rusk, Home and Gromyko will possibly carry out further exploration discussions on moves to further ease international tension. The Moscow meeting is expected to disclose areas offering most promise of agreement. A Soviet delegate indicated at Geneva the Soviet Union wants to discuss as the first item a non-aggression pact between NATO and the Warsaw bloc.

GERMANIES

THE UNITED STATES and Britain have assured West Germany that nothing happened in Moscow, nor would anything be done in the coming cold war "peace" talks that could amount to diplomatic recognition of Communists. On a tour of West Germany, Secretary of Defense McNamara also assured West German leaders that U.S. military efforts in Europe will not be reduced. One of McNamara's main jobs is to discuss an agreement under which West Germany spends up to $700 million a year on military goods and services in the United States, thus reducing U.S. gold outflow. The agreement is up for renewal.

West Germany is taking advantage of Moscow's loosening stranglehold on East European satellites to further relations. Negotiations have been made with Warsaw for a trade mission, tantamount to an embassy in all but name. Negotiations also have been quietly started with Budapest, Romania and Bulgaria. Yugoslavia may resume relations with West Germany on a "trade mission" basis.

RIGHTS LEGISLATION

AFTER SIX DAYS OF hearings on the administration's civil rights program, Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy bowed to modifications in the public accommodations provision.

Under questioning by Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., Kennedy said at a Senate Judiciary Committee hearing he would have no objections to an amendment eliminating beauty shops, barber shops and swimming pools from coverage under the public accommodations provision. But the public accommodations section of the seven-point rights bill would require desegregation of restaurants, hotels, motels, stores, and other private establishments catering to the general public. The authority is to come under a commerce clause in interests of interstate commerce, a dangerous opening for federal government regulation of the privacy of "Mrs. Murphy's boarding house" should it be situated in a location to come under the extended interstate commerce clause's jurisdiction.

KENNEDY

A MAJORITY OF Louisiana's congressional delegation joined in a chorus protesting a proposal for making towns near military bases off limits should they fail to desegregate. Sen. Allen J. Ellender and Rep. Otto Passman termed the plan, "economic blackmail." Rep. Hale Boggs, said if any section of the Pentagon directive violates any law it should be made the subject of an immediate congressional inquiry. Other Louisiana solons' comments were: Rep. Joe Waggonner, the secretary of defense should resign if he thinks the military should devote time to social reforms; Rep. Edwin E. Willis, "beyond the authority, of law (and) is completely wrong and unjustified." Rep. Edward Hebert, the order has "placed us in a Gestapo state." Rep. James Morrison, "If it furthers integration I am against it." Rep. Gillis Long, "The Kennedy Administration has pushed the Armed Services into the political arena." Sen. Russell Long, "This is a complete outrage. The right to choose one's company is fundamental to a free country. . ."

ALFRED FITT

Albeit, another New Frontiersman has come to be. Defense Secretary Robert McNamara has appointed Yale graduate Alfred B. Fitt as new Pentagon chief of the military civil rights program. Formal title is deputy assistant secretary of defense for civil rights.

AFTER A BID TO return to collective bargaining instead of legislation, little progress was made between rail unions and management. At week's end the four-year dispute remained unsettled. As talks wore on, five Senate Democrats introduced legislation to require 60 days more for bargaining in the work rules dispute.

IN A CONGRESS swamped with bills, House leaders pulled two long - delayed school aid bills out of deep freeze and prepared to push for their passage before the big civil rights battle hits the floor. Hearings were given the bills Thursday by the House Rules Committee, and might be the only school bills considered this year.

TAXPAYERS who itemize deductions on federal returns might not be able to list state gasoline, cigarette and liquor taxes as the House Ways and Means Committee included an earlier tentative recommendation as part of President Kennedy's tax cut and revision program.

UNRUH

IN THE CALIFORNIA ASSEMBLY, Speaker Jesse M. Unruh backed by his Democratic majority, invoked a parliamentary procedure and locked up Republicans overnight as a stand-still between Democrats and Republicans over spending stale-mated the Legislature.

AT BATON ROUGE the Louisiana Chapter of Coordinating Committee for Fundamental American Freedoms (CCFAF), group to fight proposed federal civil rights legislation organized and raised $10,000 support. Also, the Catholic Church proposed integration of the Baton Rouge diocese, and three Negro policemen began training during the past week.

EARTHQUAKE

Yugoslav officials have abandoned hope of finding any more survivors amid rubble of toppled buildings in the Communist showplace of Skopje, ruined in a few minutes by earth tremors which continued through the week. Disaster workers recovered 854 bodies, but it was believed at least another 500 or possibly 1,000 were dead. World - wide relief expeditions went to the aid of the stricken city. The U.S. sent Army medical units to help heal injured survivors. French disaster specialists equipped with instruments able to detect a heart beat beneath 15 feet of rubble reported no signs of life on their rubble probing machines. Clean - up crews are now working desperately to clear rubble before disease and new tremors begin.

SPACE RACE

THE FIRST CRACK in a previously unanimous endorsement of the race to put a man on the moon this decade appeared when 57 House members dissented on authorizing NASA to spend $5.2 billion in the current fiscal year. Although the NASA budget is considerably above the $3.7 billion last year, the 55 dissenters also represented a sharp contrast when compared with last year's 342-0 vote. Some scientific observers believe the pace is too rapid to judge results correctly. Other observers say the hysteria over Russian space accomplishments is beginning to lessen, particularly when the Soviets failed to make a connection with a space rendezvous between two capsules last spring. Using a woman astronaut is believed to have alleviated failure in the venture by winning in the propaganda column. At any rate the trick is to fly to the moon in a space rocket. Not climb to it on a stack of dollar bills.

Cuba's Night Life Dulled By Castroism

Clubs In Business But Out Of Spirit, Or At Least Most

By GEORGE ARFELD

NEW YORK (AP)—That watering spot you used to frequent in Havana may still be in business under government ownership, but its stock of spirits has dwindled to throat-searing rum, and cheap Cuban gin and brandy.

Night life is such an integral part of the Havana scene that despite 4½ years of communism it manages to survive. The bars aren't as plush and the air conditioning may be out of commission but the patrons still make a go of it and try to relive old times.

"Ah, you should have known the Havana of yesteryear," Havaneros will sigh to visiting foreigners as they sip their rum highballs, now dubbed Mata-Ratas, or Rat Killers.

The old Floridita Bar, a favorite of Ernest Hemingway, still stands at the same corner, but you may not recognize it inside. The large mirrors behind the mahogany bar have been torn down to make room for a garish fresco depicting Fidel Castro and his guerrilla cronies in field uniforms and stern faces.

"They look as if they had tasted the drinks they serve these days," a British resident once commented.

Hemingway's bust has been pushed into a corner, next to a poster urging waiters to be neat and courteous.

The famous Sloppy Joe's, somehow still under private management, is usually almost deserted. Pictures of international celebrities who helped make it a Havana landmark cover the walls.

"Sloppy Joe's, Where the Wet Begins," reads a dusty sign in English above the bar. All patrons now are certain to be Cubas, talking to one another in low voices.

Some of the more famous fleshpots have been closed. The Mambo Bar is now a worker's cafeteria, operating under the prim name of Restaurant Prague.

But a block off the famous Prado Avenue, garish neons still light the way into bars dark enough to fool customers in search of willing beauties.

Castro has been successful in pulling most prostitutes off the important streets. But streetwalkers and call girls continue to thrive, plying one of the few forms of free enterprise to be found in Cuba.

The well-known sporting houses are also a thing of the past.

Prostitution's persistence does not agree with one of Castro's theories, which blames the United States for creating the world's oldest profession. He once said the passion peddlers thrived in Cuba because of American tourists and unemployment allegedly caused by U.S. control of the Cuban economy.

The government has opened schools of rehabilitation for retired streetwalkers and has said it eventually hopes to stamp out prostitution.

On the other hand, the regime is interested in keeping night club shows going. The Tropicana cabaret and the better hotels put on nightly shows, where the company attempts its best under a limited budget.

It is not infrequent to see a shapely chorine going through her steps in ragged mesh hose or soiled clothes.

The night club shows have proven to be a big hit with Russian and East European audiences who appear never to have seen anything like it.

The East European's favorite drink in a bar or night spot is a tall drink made of rum and cola. It is known as a Cuba Libre, meaning Free Cuba.

Most Unusual Inauguration Is Recalled

PLYMOUTH, Vt. (UPI) — The most unusual presidential inauguration ceremony in the nation's history took place in this quiet hamlet 40 years ago Saturday.

Calvin Cooledge became the 30th president of the United States in a brief ceremony at 2:47 a.m. witnessed by only a handful of persons.

Coolidge, then the vice president was sworn in by his father, Col. John Coolidge, shortly after word was received that President Warren G. Harding had died in California.

The Coolidge home here today is much the same as it was on that historic morning when "Silent Cal" took his oath, nodded at those in the room and went back to bed.

A small group of neighbors, state officials and John Coolidge, son of the late president, will gather here Sunday to commemorate the inauguration.

Today there is just one man alive who was in the farm house parlor when Coolidge took his oath. He is Joe H. Fountain who then was a young newspaperman. Fountain is now an executive with the Central Vermont Railroad.

NEARLY HALF OF EXPENSES

New Zealand Spends Heavily In Budget On Welfare Side

By GORDON TAIT

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP) — For every $100 the New Zealand government is spending, $45 goes for social services, $5.90 for defense, $7.60 for handling the public debt, and the remainder on other expenses of governments, such as police, roads and administration.

That in effect is what the New Zealand budget for the year ending March 31, 1964 says.

It means that again New Zealand will spend nearly half the government's income on welfare for this first of the welfare states. In fact, the year's social services expenses, which include free education, will be a slight increase over last year's 44.9 per cent.

Perhaps the most startling figure is that the government expects to pay out during the year $9.40 for pills and other medicines for every one of the 2.5 million people in this island dominion.

This free medicine is more of a worry to the government than the free hospitalization, dental treatment, universal superannuation, invalid pensions, subsidized medical treatment and all the odds and ends.

The government has indicated to doctors it would like them to go easy on their prescriptions, but the annual bill keeps rising. The result, of course, is that New Zealand is a big market for drug firms, all the bathroom cupboards are littered with unused pills and half-finished bottles of medicine, and critics call the people a nation of drug addicts.

But no government has dared scale back the "security from cradle to grave" since the Social Security Act was made law in 1938.

Governments, labor and anti-labor, have tinkered with it, but only to provide bigger benefits. New Zealand newsmen tell you it would be political hara-kiri to cut back the benefits, or that the Social Security Act is a sacred cow the government just can't touch.

The original act of 1938 says in the preamble it is: "An act to provide for the payment of superannuation benefits and of other benefits designed to safeguard the people of New Zealand from disease, widowhood, orphanhood, unemployment and other exceptional conditions; to provide a system whereby medical and hospital treatment will be made available to persons requiring such treatment; and further to provide such other benefits as will be necessary to maintain and promote the health and general welfare of the community."

That's what it remains today. The result is the government will spend 235.9 million New Zealand pounds — $660.5 million — of its budget on what are called social services.

Figures don't mean much, because New Zealand living costs are low compared with the United States and most other Western countries. But to give an idea of the scope:

There is $2.10 a week for every child under 16; an age pension of $25.20 a week for husband and wife at age 60, but subject to a means test; at age 65 that pension becomes universal superannuation, is not subject to a means test, and is enough to get along on.

There are special pensions or payouts for widows, orphans, the unemployed, permanent invalids, and others who can show they are in need. Illness or having a baby means virtually nothing out of pocket because of government payments and free treatment.

What do the people think about it?

New Zealand is to have a general election in November. You can bet your last tooth no campaigning party will suggest cutting Social Security benefits.

If it did, it would lose many tens of thousands of votes and would gain a few thousands—from some of the healthy young who help pay for it all and realize it will be many years before they start to take out, from the very few rich who realize they will never take out what they put in and from the few who argue it is all making New Zealanders a race of mediocre people who have no fears of illness, starvation, and unemployment—and no hope of being millionaires.

The chances are that the government will be returned in the November general election, probably with a reduction in its present majority of 12 in a house of 80.

Why fewer seats? Possibly because it didn't hand out enough increases in pensions and other Social Security benefits in the new budget, plus the fact that New Zealanders like to change their government from time to time.

SLEEPY NIGERIA TOWN

Television, Peace Corps Arrive In Ancient Badagry

By DENNIS NEELD

BADAGRY, Nigeria (AP)—Television and the Peace Corps have come to this ancient West African port that once echoed to the cries of a million slaves.

Badagry today is a sleepy market town of some 5,000. Two hundred years ago it was a thriving center of the slave trade. Four times as many persons lived here. Seamen from half a dozen nations thronged its bustling waterfront.

But the port of Badagry declined and fell into disuse with the suppression of the slave trade. Today no ships lie at anchor beyond the treacherous surf that crashes on Badagry beach — the last a multitude of slaves ever saw of their homeland.

Wooden jetties across the lagoon have long since rotted away. Fishermen and their families have moved into Badagry's grim barracoons — airless prisons that held up to 1,000 slaves. Others have crumbled into ruins.

Most slaves were captured during savage intertribal wars. Powerful African warlords brought them to the coast for sale to Dutch, Portuguese, Danish and British traders.

For every 300 slaves who survived a year in America and the West Indies, it is estimated that 700 perished. About 500 died at the time of the raid or on the journey to the sea, 125 during the voyage, and 75 on landing.

Weighed down by heavy chains around their necks, arms, waists and feet, men, women and children were herded into Badagry's slave market.

A garish voodoo temple looks out on the dusty clearing that was the old market site. Huge clock faces and weird animal figures are painted on the temple walls. Local guides say pagan worshipers still assemble here for services conducted by voodoo priests.

In the market, naked slaves were minutely examined for physical defects. Then they were sold or bartered for gin, tobacco, rolls of cloth. In 1786 a slave bought a threefold profit on being sold in the West Indies.

Near the old slave market, in a local chief's compound, an African woman has a box full of slave chains. The iron neck shackles were jointed to open, ending in loops through which a heavy chain was passed. There were also handcuffs, some for small children, through which a bar was fixed.

On the waterfront, one of the old Portuguese barracoons is still crowded. A dozen or more families live in the dank, dark cells. Holes have been punched in the walls for ventilation. Heavy wooden doors lead on to a courtyard surrounded by open sheds, some with rings masoned into the walls, to which slaves could be tethered.

The tomb of a local chief has been built in the courtyard where once the slaves were branded before being loaded aboard huge canoes for a journey across the mile-wide lagoon.

Similar canoes are sailed today by Badagry's fishermen.

Once over the lagoon, the column of slaves was driven across a narrow sandbar and loaded once more into canoes. Then they were paddled out to the waiting slave ships. They had seen the last of their native Africa. Before them lay the voyage to America, the terrible "middle passage" on which millions died.

Missionaries as well as slavers came to Badagry. British Wesleyans first preached Christianity here in 1842. A monument marks the spot. In the local cemetery are the neatly tended graves of several missionaries who died here.

Today only two white people live in the town—Peace Corps volunteers Mary Reed, 24, of Memphis, Tenn., and Cynthia Berry, 25, of Philadelphia. They teach at the local high school.

Mary was alone when she first arrived here. And she thought she was a voodoo victim. She returned to her bungalow one night to find her cooking pot holed in several places.

"I was scared stiff," she admits. "I thought someone was sticking pins in a little doll marked Mary Reed. But it turned out to be a disgruntled houseboy who'd been dismissed by previous occupants of the house."

Television aerials sprout above the huts and houses of Badagry. Africans whose grandfathers were a slaver's prey tune in now to Bat Masterson and Perry Mason.

But the old bad days are not forgotten. On a dark night on Badagry beach it is said you still can hear the cries of slaves above the pounding surf.

In Review

United Press International

The Last Of The Incas, by Edward Hyams and George Ordish (Simon and Schuster $6): A lament for the passing of a political anachronism: the Inca Empire, which continued something very like the commonwealths of prehistory into comparatively modern times. The authors believe "strong, central, socialist - style governments" were imposed on the area where the Incas flourished by inhospitable terrain — coastal plains where water was scarce backed by towering mountains where arable land was hard to find. Whatever the reason, it appears that a form of communism started early on the mid-Pacific slopes of the Andes and had quite a long run. In a material way, collectivism appears to have worked quite well in the pre-Columbian Andes. It produced engineers, architectsi and scholars who were at least the equal in most respects of their contemporaries in medieval Europe (although they never invented the wheel or devised a written language). The best-known and strangest fact about the Inca empire is the way in which a nation of perhaps 16 million people, with a victorious army of 50,000 in the field, was taken over in the mid-16th century by about 180 rather raffish free enterprisers from Spain. The authors suggest this was possible because of the strict regimentation which made it impossible for anyone in the empire to do anything while the god-emperor was a captive of the Spainards. "The Last of the Incas" is a meticulously researched and well-organized exploration of history which may be marred for many American readers by the authors' evident partiality to communism.

John Goldfarb, Please Come Home!, by Willam Peter Blatty (Doubleday $3.50): Blatty, one of the funniest slapdash humorists currently in business, ushers in this year's hammock season with an amiable satire. Blatty's hero is what the author describes as a "lackey of the ill-timed event" — a man who excels most of the time at everything he attempts but invariably muffs his big moment. At the start of the book, John Goldfarb's crippled U2 is crashing in what really ought to be Russia. Due to a minor compass error, however, it seems he actually has landed in a country called Fawzi Arabia. That's an awkward spot for any Jewish skyspy to be in, but it is double bitter for Goldfarb because of his record. A fighter ace in Korea, he accidentally landed his entire flight on a communist airfield; a football star at Los Angeles's Subliminal U., he ran 95 yards for a touchdown against Notre Dame — the wrong way. His adventures as a virtual prisoner in the palace of Arabia's mad King Fawz make up the rest of the story, climaxed by one of the wildest football games in fiction: Notre Dame vs. Fawz U., and no holds barred. Blatty, who has been described as "a blue-eyed, mixed-up Lebanese," wields the satrical needle impartially in "John Goldfarb," pricking "new frontier" Washington as well as the double-dealing Middle East.

The Grand And The Glorious, by Dan Cushman (McGraw-Hill $4.95): The United States came of age while the 20th century was in its teens and as any adolescent will tell you, nothing will ever be the same again. These two new books present different aspects of America's donning of the toga virils. Angle progresses chronologically through the events of his chosen years, which he regards quite reasonably as a turning point in U.S. history. In 1913, Woodrow Wilson became President of the United States; the first Armory Show introduced modern art to this country; Francis Quimet shook the golfing world by defeating two British professionals in the U.S. Open, and J. P. Morgan died. These and other events large and small are skillfully woven by Angle into an account of a halcyon year during which every reputable authority agreed that there could never really be another major war. Cushman's book covers only a day rather than a year. It is a fictional account of one small town's enjoyment of July 4, 1916 — nearly two years after the start of the major war that couldn't happen. The story is not, on the surface at least, an account of world-shaking events. It is, as a novel, merely the story of two love affairs — one satisfactory from the juvenile narrator's point of view, the other disappointing. Still it contains carefully planted tokens of things to come, such as Grnadfather's high-powered automobile. "The Grand and the Glorious" is a touching evocation of things that were and (unhappily in most cases) never will be again.

Racoon Story Is Account Of Another Era

RASCAL. By Sterling North. Dutton, $3.95.

Let's read this one for fun. And some of us will read it with a bittersweet, nostalgic sigh that whispers of old memories.

It is a book about a boy and his pet raccoon. It begins in May 1918, when North was 11 years old. He and his drooling Great Dane, Wowser, brought home from the woods a baby raccoon that soon proved to be a bright, playful, curiosity-filled little rascal—so he was given an appropriate name.

Month by month the chronicle flows on, telling how Rascal fished for crawdads, slept with his young master, loved to ride a bicycle or boat, made friends with a race horse and generally had a romp. There was the sad necessity for penning up Rascal when the sweet corn began to disappear, and at Christmas time the decorated tree had to be protected from Rascal's depredations. And finally there was what they used to refer as "the call of the wild."

This has won an "animal book" prize. But no matter how cute this critter is, the raccoon isn't the whole story. The book is about a boy too. As North acknowledged when he subtitled it "A Memoir of a Better Era."

Young Sterling had a remarkable opportunity to know the woods, lakes and rivers of his native Wisconsin. His mother was dead, his erudite father often was away and the boy could be a Huckleberry Finn on his own. What other lad would be allowed to build his own canoe right in the living room?

It is a fine story about a boy, a raccoon and a "Better Era." Let's enjoy a smile in the reading, and not be ashamed of a little sad envy over the lost happiness of the days that are gone.

Relocation Is Planned For Cooper Union

By MILES A. SMITH
AP Arts Editor

NEW YORK — A famous education institution, The Cooper Union, is faced with a dilemma about a worthy, but specialized, museum which has been under its wing since 1897.

The answer may be that the museum will be discontinued, and its collections "relocated" in other museums — preferably in the New York area.

Cooper Union was founded in 1859 by inventor Peter Cooper as a free - tuition educational institution. It now has approximately 1,300 undergraduates attending day and night classes, about equally divided between the School of Engineering and the School of Art and Architecture. Hundreds more attend adult education activities.

The museum is called "The Museum for the Arts of Decoration." Two granddaughters of the founder, Sarah Cooper Hewitt and Eleanor Garnier Hewitt, were largely responsible for assembling its collections, beginning in the 1890's.

With additions from other donors, the museum now has nearly 100,000 items. Their value is in the millions, but no one has made even an approximate estimate.

Primarily there are prints, textiles, wallpapers, ceramics and glass, plus everything from jewelry, furniture and ironwork to birdcages.

There's the rub. The collections are in the decorative arts.

"Over the years our Art School has grown away from the decorative arts," says Cooper Union's president, Dr. Richard F. Humphreys. "It has become a school for the fine arts. Our arts faculty reports the students are using this museum no more than they are using other New York museums for their study."

Then there is the question of operating costs. With curators, assistants, clerks and guards, the museum has a score of people on its staff. Cooper Union subsists on endowments and alumni contributions, and nearly all the museum's tight budget has to come out of the general educational fund.

Furthermore, as Dr. Humphreys puts it, "for various reasons the museum — though it is a 'working museum' for specialists — is not heavily used by the public. We are said to be off the beaten path, away from the museums that are located uptown."

The museum, on the fourth floor of the original Cooper Union building, now is closed to the general public, though designers, ressearchers and scholars still can work there, while a study is being made with the help of members of the staff of the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Mainly this study is to determine the possibilities of placing the various collections in other locations.

"To the extent possible," says Dr. Humphreys, "this would be within the city of New York. We have an obligation to serve the people of this city.

If the study shows "relocation" of the collections to be advisable, Dr. Humphryes said, "we hope to recover some of their value from whatever sources receive them."

He said that if dollars were the only consideration, "we would get a greater return at a series of public auctions over a period of say five years. But if some museum could benefit from a certain collection, and was able to reimburse us for only a fraction of its estimated worth, we think it would be better to have the collection go to that museum."

Dr. Humphreys mentioned no specific places that might receive the collections. But counting art museums, historical institutions, specialized museums and schools, there would be several dozen locations in the Greater New York area that might be considered.

BOOKS

GUIDE TO GOOD READING

Betty Smith Novel On Marital Bliss

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

Numbers of interesting books in all fields have been added to the book collection of the Ouachita Parish Public Library during the past weeks. Among the books mentioned today, there is certain to be something for every reader. Probably the most popular book among the new fiction titles will be Betty Smith's new book, "Joy in The Morning." This is the story of the first year of a marriage and critics say that it is the best thing which the author has done since "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn."

Victoria Holt is a master of the novel of suspense and her latest book promises to have the same appeal as her earlier ones. This is "Bride of Pendorric. The setting is the wild region of Cornwall and it is a book which once begun, cannot be put aside.

"Flesh" is the title of a new book by Brigid Brophy. It is a rather sophisticated novel of life in London and will not interest every reader. An exciting historical novel is "Who Was Then The Gentleman?" written by Charles E. Israel. This is the story of the Wat Tyler rebellion in England in the fourteenth century. The author makes the period come alive and has created several unforgettable characters.

"The Odyssey of Kostas Volakis" by Harry Petrakis is the story of an immigrant couple in Chicago and details the saga of this family from 1919 to 1954. The Greek background of the story is especially interesting. "Scandalous John" by Richard Gardner is a very humorous story of a college professor in Nevada, who decided to relive the days of the great cattle drives. Although he has only one cow and a young Mexican boy is his only employee, he makes a vailiant effort to carry out the drive in the great tradition. This is a funny story, which will appeal to all who enjoy western stories.

The field on non-fiction also offers an interesting variety of material. "So You Want To Be A Librarian" by Sarah Wallace is an excellent book about this interesting profession. The books of Gina Cerminara dealing with the subject of reincarnation are popular with many readers. The latest one is called "Many Lives, Many Loves. "An interesting book about the public debt of our country is "A Primer on Government Spending" written by Robert L. Heilbroner.

The judicial opinions of Chief Justice Black have been collected in a book called "One Mans Stand for Freedom. A new book which accurately portrays the position of the South is "The Southern Case For School Segregation" written by James J. Kilpatrick.

"Almost White" by Brewster Berry is an interesting book about the mixed races in this country. "The Hired Killers" by Peter Wyden gives a great deal of information about the many killings which are done for money. In the field of international relations there are several important new books. "NATO in The 1960's" is the title of a study by Alastair Buchan. "Alliance Born of Danger" by Charles A. Cerami is a discussion of the American relation to the European common market. "The Iron Curtain" by Harry and Bonaro Overstreet is an excellent discussion of the implications of Russian control and the need for a freedom offensive.

The library never has enough books on the subject of tropical fish and aquariums. We are happy that two new ones have been added this week. One is "Tropical Fish As A Hobby" by Herbert R. Axelrod and the other is "Exotic Aquarium Fishes" by William Inees. A very fine book dealing with the geography of North America is "The Face of North America" written by Peter Farb. An unusual book of natural history is "Fur and Fury" by Colby Carroll. This is the story of the weasel family.

Another subject on which the library has difficulty in supplying the demands is for books about learning typewriting at home. There are two new titles in this field, with copies in each branch of the Library. They are "Twentieth Century Typewriting" by David Lessenbery and "Refresher Typing in 24 Hours" by Philip Pepe.

An interesting hobby is the making of dolls. The Library is happy to have a new book on this subject, "Dolls and How To Make Them" by Margaret Hutchings. A most useful book for builders, architects and property owners is "Architectural Supervision of Modern Buildings" by Martin Dubin. "The Practical Nurse" by Kathryn Brownell is a book which will be useful to many people. "Table of Food Values" by Alice Bradley is most interesting for the home maker as is the latest edition of "Essentials of Nutrition" by Henry Clapp Sherman. "A Secretary's Guide To Beauty, Charm-Poise" is a book which will interest many young women. A book for the business man is "Business Without Gambling" by Louis Cheskin. It is a discussion of the application of scientific methods to marketing. "Goodbye to Gunpowder" by Donald Barr Chidsey in a history of gunpowder through the ages.

Books of house plans are always in demand. Two new ones published by House and Garden have just been received. They are "Book Of Plans, 1963" and "Building Guide — Spring-Summer 1963." For the sportsman a very fine book is America's Best Lake, Stream and River Fishing" by Heinz Ulrich. "John Mulholland's Book of Magic" will interest all amateur magicians. Artists in the community will want to see two new titles "Renior, My Faher" written by Jean Renoir and "Whitaker On Watercolor" by Frederic Whitaker. Humorous books draw a variety of readers and there are three new titles of this type available;; "Party of Twetny" by Clifton Fadiman; "Home Of Our Own" by Gladys Dimock and "The Expectant Mariner" by Shirley Deane.

Histories of the War of 1812 are not numerous and we are happy to have a new one, "The Darkest Day" by Charles G. Muller. "History Of U.S. Naval Opeartions in World War II, Vol. I", "The Battle of the Atlantic" by Samuel Eliot Mirrison is a very fine book, which will be widely used. Of great interest in this area is a new book by John D. Winters, a member of the faculty of Louisiana Tech. It is "The Civil War In Louisiana."

Author Really Bolted Country For South Seas

WHERE THE BONG TREE GROWS. By James Ramsey Ullman. World. $5.95.

His marriage had collapsed; his latest novel had been planned, and he was conscious of growing older, or Ullman did what many another man would have done; he thought of chucking it all and heading for the South Seas.

The difference is that Ullman really went. And just in time. For while he didn't see the primitive South Pacific that captivated such writers as Stevenson, Nordhoff, Hall, London and Michener (and a painter named Gaugin) his 14 months of wanderings took him to such fabled spots as Tahiti, Bora Bora, Fiji and Moorea just before the advent of the jet airliners put the islands within easy reach of the tourist hordes.

Perhaps mindful of the big league writers ahead of him, Ullman set out to see the islands as they were in 1959 - 60, regardless of the "moon-June-lagoon" cliches of the past.

He succeeded to a great extent. His book notes the billboards and beer cans, graft and garbage, disease, drunkenness and general debasement that the white man has brought to the vast areas of Micronsia and Polynesia.

But even a deliberately jaundiced eye couldn't resist the charm of the islands. He would up writing of "the lagoon, the sea — a miracle of green and blue — and beyonl them, aglow in the soft sunlight, the fairy-tale castle of the hills of Moorea—."

To cover thousands of miles and 414 days in 300 pages, Ullman had to skim over many an experience and to describe many an island in the briefest detail. This is the book's major weakness: all but the most loval readers of the National Geographic, and those fortunate enough to be familiar with the area, are likely to find that too many of these island descriptions sound just alike.

Actress Cancels Marriage Plans To Await Money

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — June Allyson, widow of actor-producer Dick Powell, announced wedding plans Saturday—and then tearfully said there would be a postponement.

Miss Allyson, 39, had told newsmen that she and Glenn Maxwell would fly to Las Vegas, Nev., Saturday afternoon for the ceremony. Maxwell, 35, is the owner of two plush barber shops at Newport Beach, Calif.

But later the actress disclosed that her attorney had advised her that an immediate marriage would deprive her of income from Powell's estate.

"I'm so upset," she said. "We talked all night and this was a spur of the moment decision. I called my attorney Bill Cruikshank. He came out to the house and gave me some very bad news. My funds are naturally tied up in the estate of my late husband Dick Powell. Bill tells me that if I marry right now, I will lose my widow's allowance from the estate.

"Glenn and I are very much in love and we still will get married, but it would be silly not to postpone it for a while due to these legal complications."

Cruikshank was not immediately available to elaborate on the legal questions involved.

"Glenn and I have known each other for more than three years. He was a friend of Dick's, and I am sure that Dick would approve very much," she said.

Ship Is Launched At New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The steamship Gulf Farmer, a $8,613,013 cargo liner, was launched Saturday at the Avondale Shipyards on the Mississippi River.

The 8,409 - ton ship, about 495 feet long and 69 feet wide, will be operated by the Gulf and South American Steamship Co., Inc.

Mrs. George Griswold, wife of the executive vice president of the company, christened the ship before it slid down Avondale's multiple side launching ways into the river.

The sideways launching is necessary because the river is not wide enough and there is too much traffic for longitudinal launching.

DEEP ROOTS

NEW YORK (AP) — The religious roots of the United States are "so deeply ingrained" that it is "doubtful if congressional or Supreme Court endorsements of a neutral or secular state" can change fundamental church-state attitudes in America, the Rev. Robert F. Drinan, dean of Boston College law school, writes in a new book, "Religion, the Courts and Public Policy" (McGraw-Hill).

12 ORIOLES FANNED

Yankee Power Hands Baltimore 3-2 Defeat

NEW YORK (AP) — Johnny Blanchard hit two home runs and Al Downing struck out 12 Baltimore Orioles Saturday in a 3-2 New York Yankee victory.

Downing weakened in the ninth with a 3-1 lead and was replaced by Bill Stafford after singles by Brooks Robinson and pinch hitter Bob Johnson, a throwing error by Tony Kubek and a ground-rule double by Jerry Adair made it 3-2 with men on second and third.

After pinch hitter Russ Snyder was walked intentionally, Luis Aparicio ended the game by bouncing into a double play on Stafford's first pitch.

Blanchard's two home runs enabled the Yanks to tie the score and take the lead. As it turned out a wild pitch by loser Milt Pappas while pitching to Yogi Berra let Tom Tresh score with the decisive run.

Downing, a 22 - year-old left-hander recalled from the Richmond farm club June 7, ran his season strikeout total to 103 in 89 2-3 innings but failed to complete the game. It was his seventh victory against three defeats. He struck out Jim Gentile three times, Boog Powell, Brooks Robinson, Al Smith and Pappas each twice and also fanned John Orsino.

Baltimore hopped on Downing in the first to score a run on successive singles by Jackie Brandt, Powell and Orsino.

Blanchard, in a home run groove in the last two weeks after a slow start, tied the score with his eighth homer leading off the fifth and put the Yanks ahead with No. 9 in the seventh. Both went into the lower right field seats. He has hit six in the last eight games in which he has played over a 13-day span.

The Yanks got the run that turned out to be decisive in the eighth inning when Tresh walked, Joe Pepitone singled and Pappas wild pitched to Berra. It was Pappas' sixth defeat.

WIN 9-5

Giants Put Halt On Cubs Streak

CHICAGO (AP)—Home runs by Willie Mays and Willie McCovey and a pair of triples by Orlando Cepeda, powered the third-place San Francisco Giants over the Chicago Cubs 9-5 Saturday and broke their six - game Wrigley Field losing streak.

The Cubs, who erased a six-run deficit Friday to whip the Giants 12-11, made another stab with a four-run fifth inning keyed by Billy Williams' 17th homer, good for three runs. It shaved the Giants' edge to 6-5, but Jack Fisher stifled the Cubs on one hit the last four innings for his sixth victory.

Jack Sanford, who was shelled in the first inning Friday, started for the Giants and had a no-hitter going through four innings. Wildness cost him a run in the first, but the first hit off him was a bloop single by lead-off batter Jim Schaffer in the fifth.

After that, a pinch-single by Merritt Ranew, a walk and Williams' blast sent him to the showers.

The Giants collected 11 hits off four opposing hurlers, including four straight blows by Cepeda before he fouled out in the ninth.

His first triple of the season scored one run in the second and he came across on Felipe Alou's double. May's 26th homer put San Francisco ahead 3-1 in the third.

McCovey's 32nd homer that kayoed starter Bob Buhl was good for two of the three runs scored in the fifth.

The Giants' added another run in the sixth and a pair in the seventh on Cepeda's single, a triple by Felipe Alou and Jose Pagan's single.

Braves Erupt In 5th Inning Against Mets

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Milwaukee Braves erupted for five runs in the sixth inning to beat the New York Mets 10-7 Saturday.

A two-run pinch single by Roy McMillan was the key blow. Frank Thomas of the Mets and Joe Torre of the Braves hit home runs.

The defeat was the Mets' 30th in their last 35 games and their 26th in their last 28 games on the road.

Casey Stengel's men took a 5-1 lead against Hank Fischer in the first three innings, with Thomas' three-run homer in the first the big blow. The braves got two runs back against Tracy Stallard in the fourth on Torre's home run, and two innings later they drove Stallard to cover.

Ken MacKenzie tried to stop the sixth inning rally but the Braves kept coming until they had an 8-5 lead. Ingredients included singles by Torre and Lou Klimchock, a double by Denis Menke, an intentional pass, McMillan's key single, a single by Eddie Mathews and an error by Al Moran.

The Mets cut the margin to 8-7 with two runs off Tony Cloninger in the seventh, but Mathews singled in two runs off Jay Hook in the eighth to wrap up the game.

Denny Lemaster, third of five Milwaukee pitchers, received credit for his eighth victory when Bob Shaw replaced Cloninger and blanked the Mets in the last three innings. Stallard was the loser.

Ruston Legion Team To Host Baton Rouge 9

RUSTON (Special) — Ruston's T. L. James Contractors the north Louisiana junior legion champions, host Baton Rouge at Frasher Field Monday night in the first of a best two out of three series for the state championship.

Gametime for Monday's encounter is 7:45 p.m.

The Rustonites travel to Baton Rouge for the second contest.

After losing its first game in the north Louisiana championship tourney held in Lake Charles the past week, Ruston bounced back to defeat the host team once and the Shreveport Optimist nine twice to capture the crown.

Errors Help Pirates Stop Cincinnati, 5-4

CINCINNATI (AP) — Sloppy fielding by the Cincinnati Reds who were guilty of four errors helped the Pittsburgh Pirates eke out a 5-4 victory Saturday with the winning run scoring on a wild pitch by Jim Coates. Four of the Reds' runs were unearned.

John Edwards dropped a foul, Eddie Kasko fumbled a grounder and pitcher John Tsitouris threw wildly during the fifth inning when Pittsburgh scored three times. Singles by Johnny Logan and Ed Bailey and a double by Roberto Clemente were scattered among the errors.

With the score tied at 3-3 in the sixth, Bill Mazeroski's double and Donn Clendenon's single put the Pirates out front, chasing Tsitouris. After Coates took over, Clendenon stole second and continued to third on Edward's low throw and scored on a wild pitch.

Cincinnati had opened up a 3-0 lead on Don Schwall in the first four innings, two of them coming on Gene Freese's fourth homer in the fourth following Marty Keough's single.

Vada Pinson's single, a walk and an error by Logan loaded the bases in the Cincinnati sixth and Pinson scored on Edwards' sacrifice fly.

Al McBean who took over in the sixth after the single and walk was awarded the victory. He blanked the Reds in the last three innings. Tsitouris was the loser.

Washington Gets Win Over Bosox Thanks To Walk

WASHINGTON (AP) — Relief pitcher Arnold Earley issued a bases loaded walk to Larry osborne in the seventh inning, forcing in the winning run in Washington's 5-4 victory over the Boston Red Sox Saturday night.

Earley relieved starter Bill Monbouquette with Boston leading 4-3 but the Senators threatening in the seventh. There was one out and pinch runner Tom Cheney on second, when Don Leppert reached on Dick Stuart's throwing error. Don Blasingame's third hit of the game drove in the tying run.

Chuck Hinton was intentionally passed to load the bases, and Osborne then gained the decisive base on balls.

The Senators moved out to a 3-1 lead with a three-run third inning on singles by Kent Retzer, Chuck Cottier, a sacrifice, a passed ball, Blasigame's triple and Hinton's single.

Stable Winner In Feature With Kitten Hayward

NEW YORK (AP) — Welterweight contender Jose Stable of New York scored a 10-round unanimous decision over Stanley (Kitten) Hayward of Philadelphia Saturday night in the nationally-televised main event at Madison Square Garden. Stable weighed 147, Hayward 147½.

After an evenly fought first and second round, Stable took a lead that he never lost. The second-ranked contender was too much for the Philadelphia Kitten, who went 10 rounds for the first time in his career.

Favored Candy Spots Takes Arlington Run

CHICAGO (AP)—Rex. C. Ellsworth's Candy Spots, a 4-5 favorite, surged from well behind to win the $131,833 Arlington Classic for 3-year-olds by five lengths Saturday.

In a tight battle for second in the one-mile feature before 29,822 were a 70-1 field horse, Admiral Vic, who edged B Major, who went off a 9-1 choice. B Major had defeated Candy Spots in the $10,000 Chicagoan earlier this summer.

Candy Spots, cleverly ridden by Willie Shoemaker, took full command coming out of the final turn and won as he pleased to take the winner's purse of $86,833. The victory increased the 1963 earnings of the Preakness winner to $594,881 and boosted the Ellsworth Stable's winning over $1 for the second successive year.

Candy Spots notched his sixth stakes victory of the year. Shoemaker kept him well off the pace until midway in the final turn. Then the big chestnut colt by Nigromante flowed past the struggling pacemakers for his commanding position in entering the stretch.

Candy Sptos returned $3.80, $3 and $2.40. Sunny Blue Farm's lightly regarded Admiral Vic, who was coupled with That Man after Moral Suasion was scratched to make it a 13-horse field, returned a whopping $30.40 and $9.60. B Major's show price was $3.60.

As expected, the Eastern challenger Jaclyn Stable's Ahoy broke fast and set the pace most of the early stages until Candy Spots made his move over a track rated fast after heavy overnight rains.

The veteran jockey said Candy Spots' time of 1:35 4-5—well behind the track record of 1:33 4-5—was good considering that the track was dull from the heavy rainfall.

'I was confident after we reached the three-eighths pole,' Shoemaker said. 'Candy Spots had moved to second but Ahoy was in front and driving and we were breezing. In the stretch as he moved out in front, Candy Spots threw his ears back and wanted to ease off. I hit him four or five times to keep his mind on his running.'

Admiral Vic, at 114 pounds and carrying 12 pounds less than Candy Spots, was slow reaching his stride. But he rallied on the final turn under the urging of Mickey Solomone and finished full of run, although he had no chance of catching Candy Spots.

AT DIXIE YOUTH MEET

West Monroe Wins 1st Match

METAIRIE (Special) — The West Monroe Dixie Youth All-Stars got off to a flying start toward the state championship here Saturday by defeating Alexandria, 9-3, in the opening game of the Louisiana State Dixie Youth Tournament.

Playing at Girard Park here, West Monroe's first round attempt for the state crown included nine hits, five-hit pitching and Bibb Ragland's three-run homer.

Douglas Johnson, the winning pitcher, struck out five batters and walked three. In the five and two-thirds innings he was on the mound, Johnson allowed Alexandria's five hits which included Wolf's three-run homer, the only time Alexandria scored.

Johnson was relived by Taylor, who previously was third base.

Ragland's delivery came in the fourth inning and completed West Monroe's scoring.

Home Run Fest Sees Minnesota Past Athletics

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Bob Allison, Harmon Killebrew and rookie Jimmie Hall rapped home runs Saturday night and led the slugging Minnesota Twins to a 7-2 victory over the Kansas City Athletics.

Left-hander Dick Stigman, winning his 11th against 10 defeats, took a five-hit shutout into the ninth, then weakened and gave up two runs on three hits after two were out. Gino Cimoli drove in both with a triple after singles by Bobby Del Greco and pinch hitter George Alusik.

By that time, the Twins had put it away with the long ball, their favorite weapon, in catching up with right-hander Dave Wickersham, who had beaten them four times without a loss this season.

Allison homered leading off the second inning and Hall rapped a two-run shot in the sixth.

The Twins fattened their advantage in the last two innings against reliever Ted Bowsfield, scoring once in the eighth on a single by Don Mincher and a two-out double by Earl Battey, and adding three in the ninth when Rich Rollins and Vic Power singled ahead of Killebrew's drive over the left field fence.

Koufax Gains 10th Shutout With 2-0 Win

HOUSTON (AP) — Sandy Koufax pitched his 10th shutout and became the majors' top winner with his 18th triumph Saturday night as the Los Angeles Dodgers edged the Houston Colts 2-0.

The victory enabled the Dodgers to maintain their 3½-game National League lead over the St. Louis Cardinals, who beat Philadelphia 7-0 Saturday afternoon.

The Dodgers, trying to break out of a slump that had cost them six losses in their last eight games, gave their ace southpaw a two-run lead before he threw a pitch.

In the first, Jim Gilliam walked and scored on a two-out triple by Tommy Davis. Davis scored on Ron Fairly's single. Bruce and reliever Hal Woodeshick stopped Los Angeles on four hits the rest of the way.

Koufax, who has lost four, retired the first 12 batters to face him before Carl Warwick beat out an infield single to deep short opening the fifth. John Bateman followed with a one-out single but Koufax retired Rusty Staub on a foul to John Roseboro and Howie Goss on a foul to Fairly.

The only other Colts baserunners were rookie Jim Wynn, who singled with one out in the seventh, and Staub, safe on Fairly's error in the eighth.

Koufax struck out the side in the second inning but fanned only one other batter — boosting his major league leading total to 199. His shutout reduced his earned run average to 1.81, best among starting pitchers in baseball. This was his 16th complete game in 26 starts.

COMIN' UP AFIELD

Set Seasons For Hunters

With Sam Hanna

Duck Season Pending

Louisiana hunters can look forward to a well-rounded program of activity from early fall to mid-spring as the 1963-64 seasons have been set by the Wild Life & Fisheries Commission.

With the dove season opening Labor Day, hunters will have an opportunity to tramp the woods until the last gobble of the turkey season from April 4-19th.

The commission ratified the seasons Tuesday, then a delegation headed by Director L. D. Young Jr. left for St. Louis where the Mississippi Flyway Council conference was held Thursday and Friday.

More than likely the U. S. Fish & Wildlife Service will hand down the framework on the waterfowl seasons the latter part of this month.

Louisiana's big season — whitetail deer — again will open a day after Thanksgiving Day or on November 29th, extending through December 16th for the first split, then from December 26th through January 10th.

This, of course, applies to the areas like our own Delta where the deer population is heavy, but there will be shorter seasons in other sections of the state.

In addition, the numerous game management areas have different seasons, which will be related in this column. Bow hunters also have a special season.

But before we get into the complicated deer season, here is the breakdown on everything else with the exception of the waterfowl season:

Doves—Sept. 2-16, Oct. 12-Nov. 3, Dec. 7 - January 7, or 70 half days. Bag limit 10, possession 20. Shooting hours, 12-noon until sunset.

Squirrel — Oct. 5-Jan. 10. Daily bag 8, possession 16.

Rabbit — Oct. 5-Feb. 15. Daily bag 8, possession 16.

Rails - Gallinules — Oct. 5-Nov. 23; Sora — Bag and possession, 25. Other rails bag and possession 15.

Woodcock — Nov. 27-Jan. 15. Bag 5, possession 10. Shooting hours, sunrise till sunet.

Snipe — Nov. 3-Jan. 13. Bag and possession 8. Shooting hours, sunrise till sunset.

Bear—Dec. 26-30. Bag 1 (male) per hunter.

Turkey — April 4-19. Daily bag 1, gobblers only.

If the Louisiana commission, joined by other southern states in the Mississippi Flyway, are successful with the government in getting relief to last year's 19½-day season (bag limit of two), then the sportsmen of the Pelican State will have some good days ahead.

Deer Season Details

Bow hunters will get a special season, October 26 through November 24, in all areas open for deer hunting. That of course means areas like Tensas and Madison, even Ouachita.

Either sex deer may be taken in all open areas for bow hunters except in Grant, Concordia, LaSalle, Caldwell, Catahoual and Natchitoches.

There are also bow seasons on the game management areas, but we will cover that in another section of this column.

Ouachita, for fun hunters, get a 15-day season, November 29 through December 6, then from December 6 through January 1.

This season also applies to Winn, Jackson, Caldwell, Franklin, Catahoula, LSalle, Union, Lincoln and Richland Parishes. It also applies to the border sections of those parishes.

For instance, in Franklin the season applies to that part of the parish that connects Caldwell and Richland while the section of Franklin that connects Tensas and Madison will have the long deer season.

Northeast Louisiana parishes having a deer season from November 29 to December 16 and from December 26 through January 10 include Union, Morehouse, West Carroll, Winn, Caldwell, LaSalle, Grant, West Carroll, East Carroll, Madison, Richland, Franklin, Tensas, Catahoula, LaSalle, Concordia.

It would take too much space to print the definitions of the areas that the different season apply to at this time.

Hunters should get a copy of the hunting regulations, which will be released soon by the commission.

In short, the long deer season applies to the areas with the big deer concentrations while the shorter seasons apply to the areas with the smaller deer concentrations.

Game Management Areas

All of the game management areas in the Monroe area will have a five-day deer season running from November 29-December 3.

Hunters can take either sex until the designated number of deer are taken after which the remaining days of the total five days, if any, shall be open to "bucks only" hunting.

Jackson-Bienville — Deer, 400 any deer and 5 days. Squirrel - rabbit, Oct. 5-13; Dec. 7-15; season permit. Quail, first 5 days to begin the first Saturday after the end of the deer season and last 10 days February 16-25. Season permit.

Union — Deer, 50 any deer and 5 days, daily permit. Squirrel-rabbit — Oct. 5-27. Season permit.

East Carroll — Deer, 125 any deer and 5 days. Daily permit. Squirrel - rabbit — Oct. 5-27. Season permit.

Catahoula — Deer, 250 any deer and 5 days; daily permit. Squirrel - rabbit — Oct. 5-27, season permit.

Caldwell — Deer, 75 any deer and 5 days; daily permit. Squirrel-rabbit — Oct. 5-27, season permit.

Chicago Mills — Deer, 1000 (minimum, decretion of bilogists) any deer and 5 days; daily permit. Squirrel-rabbit — Oct. 5-27; season permit. Turkey — April 4-19, season permit.

The Russell Sage Wildlife Management Area in Lafourche Swamp near Monroe will have the same season as Ouachita — from November 29 through December 6, from December 26 through January 1. But dogs will not be permitted on the Russell Sage area.

All other season on the Russell Sage will be the same as those in the open sections of Ouachita. Again, turkey hunting will not be allowed and duck hunters cannot build permanent duck blinds.

The bag limit on deer will be the same — two bucks for the season, just one buck on any one day.

Meantime, the duck season is pending. The picture will be complete when the waterfowl season is set, probably in early September by the commission after it receives the framework from the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service.

Little Man's Corner

Night fishing caught on and the little men made news afield.

With the arrival of the dog days, fishermen got smart, loaded their boats with lanterns and headed out at night. This practice is especially popular at Bussey.

A local fisherman told us that Bussey one night this week was as well-lighted as DeSiard Street.

They're hanging the lanters in trees or bushes, backing off to the edge of the circle that the light makes, then wait for the fish to swim in. Fishing eight feet deep, the fishermen are having fun.

Gordon Surguine and Owen Lowe of Monroe had a good night trip to Bussey. They loaded the boat with specs.

Night fishing is also popular on Black Bayou here. Vincent Danna, fishing with a homemade Helldriver, has been having lots of luck at night.

From Homer, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Davidson and Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Peterson got their limits of white perch in Larto Lake. The Jean-Jonesville area continues to be good for fishing.

Two Winnsboro anglers, Mark Butler and Mack Rogillio (home for a visit), had a fair bass trip at Lake St. John. From reports, the bass fishing is better at Bruin, using fly rods early in the morning.

Concordia has been producing some good bass catches too, along with good bream catches. H. C. King, Carl Abel, Edwin C. Carol and Dempsey McMullen of Ferriday got their limits of bass.

On a completely different type of fishing, a former resident of Winnsboro, Ed Hetherwick, who still has friends here despite an absence of many years, sends down a clipping from the Jackson, Mich. newspaper regarding a recent trip he took in the backcountry of Canada.

TAKE A BEATHER

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The Texas Highway Department says it will not be long before a traveler in the state will have to go only 37 miles between roadside parks. The state's plans for its interstate highway system include enough safety rest areas for one each 37 miles, or about each 40 minutes of driving.

ACTION WAS heavy Saturday morning at the Tupawek Bowmen's range as the first day of the Tupawek archery tournament was unreeled. Here C. A. TUPAWEK BOWMEN TOURNAMENT

Final Rounds Are Slated Today In Archery Affair

After a successful initial day of action, the first annual Tupawek Archers Jubilee winds up today with the two final rounds.

The 28 field target rounds will be unreeled this morning with the 28 animal target action slated to start at 1:30 p.m. The field target begins at 9:00 a.m.

Max Zeiner of Little Rock and Tommy Jackson from West Monroe made the biggest noise with their bows Saturday and both should finish high on the list of winners.

Bobby, from Jackson, Miss., is in the junior division but his score ranked with the top men in any division. He shot a tremendous 790.

Herrington is just back from the National Junior Tournament held in California where he finished second.

After the final round today, the Tupawek Bowmen will present trophies for first and second place winners in all divisions, plus medals for third place finishers.

Jack Bell, acting club president, said the Bowmen were well pleased with turnout for Saturday's action and everyone is invited out to see today's concluding rounds.

Kathy Whitworth Women's Winner

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Tall Kathy Whitworth, a 24-year-old veteran of the pro golf tour from Jal, N.M., fashioned a one-over-par 73 and surged into a two stroke lead with a 216 total at the 54-hole mark Saturday in the $12,500 Milwaukee Women's Open.

Miss Whitworth, winner of the Wolverine Open last Monday, started the third round two strokes behind Ruth Jessen, but then roared in front as scores skied on a challenging North Shore Country Club course soaked by a series of thunderstorms and whipped by a westerly wind.

The third highest money winner on the tournament trail this year, Miss Whitworth went out in one-over-par 36 and then traveled the back nine in two-over 37.

Miss Jessen encountered her first trouble of the tournament on the 6,508 layout and soared to a 77 for a three-round total of 218. Marilynn Smith struggled to a 75 and Jackie Pung posted the only sub-par round of the day with a 71 as they shared second place with Miss Jessen.

Louise Suggs had a 73 for a 219 total after putting her approach shot within six inches of the cup for an easy putt on the 18th green.

Trailing another stroke back at 220 were National Open champion Mary Mills and Kathy Cornelius, who had par equalling 72s while playing in Miss Pung's threesome. No others managed to match regulation figures.

Golf Capitalists To Form Team In Canada Cup

NEW YORK (AP) — Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus, those par-cracking capitalists in a taut struggle for world golf honors, will be teammates as U.S. representatives in the 11th annual international Canada Cup matches at Paris Oct. 24-27.

Selection of this dream team to oppose hand-picked tandems from 33 other nations in the 72-hole stroke play competition was announced Saturday by Sidney L. James, chairman of the executive committee of the International Golf Association.

The two muscle men of American golf were overwhelming favorites of the host country, which was permitted by tradition to choose the U.S. players from a list of six submitted by the Professional Golfers Association.

Americans Rake British Trackmen

LONDON (UPI) — America's record - conscious 440-yard relay suffered a stunning upset in the first day of the U.S. - Britain track and field meet Saturday but the American men piled up a 61-44 team lead and the U.S. women managed to trail by only one point at 28-27.

The U.S. men broke two British "all comers" records—Hayes Jones of Detroit winning the 120-yard high hurdles in 13.8 seconds and Ralph Boston of Los Angeles broad jumping 25 feet, 10 inches. And Bob Hayes tied the White City stadium record by winning the 100-yard dash in 9.5 seconds on the rain-soaked track.

But even the great Hayes couldn't save the U.S. 440 - yard relay from defeat — a real jolt to the Yanks because U.S. coach Payton Jordan had forecast they would break the world record of 39.6 seconds.

Instead it was the British foursome that tied a world record by winning in 40.0 seconds, matching the mark for running this relay around two turns. The Britons—Pete Radford and the three Jones boys, Ron, David and Berwyn—won by a strike as anchor man Hayes crossed the line in 40.1 seconds for the U.S. team.

Jordan said poor baton passing, which has plagued the U.S. team on its tour and caused a disqualification in Moscow, as a major reason for the defeat.

All told the U.S. men won seven of today's 10 events—a brilliant showing but below the pre-meet forecast of nine victories.

On the other hand, the U. S. women's team which was soundly whipped on this European tour by Russia, Poland, and West Germany, won three of five events and came within an eyelash of holding the team lead at the end of the first day. The meet concludes Monday.

In addition to Jones, Hayes, and Boston, other U.S. men winners were Bob Humphreys of Los Angeles in the discus throw with 185 feet, 9 inches; Tom O'Hara of Loyola of Chicago in the one mile run in 4:03.0; Gene Johnson of California in the high jump with six feet, 8 inches, and Ulis Williams of Arizona State in the 440-yard run in 46.7 seconds.

Besides winning the 440 - yard relay, Britain picked up a surprise victory in the hammer throw as Howard Payne heaved the weight 207 feet, 4 inches and an expected win the six - mile run as Ron Hill lead the way in 27:56.0.

Sandra Knott of Cleveland broke the American record for 880 yards to win that event in the women's competition in 2:10.7, nosing out Britain's Joy Catling. Other U.S. Women winners were Rosie Bond of Riverside, Calif., in the 80-meter high hurdles in 11.1 seconds and Cynthia Wyatt of Honolulu in the shot put with 48 feet, 4½ inches.

British women victors were Susan Platt in the javelin with 166 feet, 8½ inches and Dorothy Hyman in the 220-yard dash in 23.8 seconds.

SOLVES ALL PROBLEMS

Hunter Is Coach, Dad To His Club

BLUEFIELD, Va. (AP)—There are times when Billy Hunter wonders whether he's running a baseball team or a nursery in his job as a manager in the all-rookie Appalachian League.

Hunter, not so long ago a major league shortstop, is in his second year as skipper of the Bluefield Orioles in the "Appy," and his squad of 30 players — Baltimore chattel—averages just 18 years of age.

Looking about at all that incredible youth, Hunter, now 35 and graying, says, "Managing is the easiest part. It's keeping the boys happy and out of trouble that's the problem.

"Most of them are away from home for the first time and just don't realize that now they're pros."

Aside from teaching his charges the finer points of the game, the soft-spoken Hunter must be a father to them, too: consoling the homesick, restraining the overexuberant, damming young tears of disappointment.

There are boys who argue when he has to cut them from his squad. There are others who are belligerent, others who cry.

Hunter's team is one of six in the Appy. There are clubs at Salem, Bluefield and Wytheville in Virginia; Harlan in Kentucky, and Kingsport and Middlesboro in Tennessee. They ride the mountain roads in buses.

"To show you how green some of the kids are," says Hunter, "I had one boy who wanted to make a phone call during the middle of a game.

"He had promised his parents he'd call them at 8 o'clock. When I asked why he hadn't planned to call at a later hour, he said, 'Gee, I never thought of it."

Yet Hunter doesn't really mind his role as father to 30 boys. He believes, in truth, his job is the most important in baseball.

"It's so important," he says, "that it would be a good idea to have a couple of additional coaches to help the boys. The kids need coaching more than managing at this point, because here is where we correct their basic faults and teach them the fundamentals. . ."

"Minor mistakes can soon be corrected, because the boys here are so eager to learn. They're here for only one year, and they're all eyes and ears. That makes it tough to cut the team.

"In fact, I guess telling a boy he's not a major league prospect is the saddest part of my job.

"Some cry when you tell them that, and some want to fight me, but none ever believes he should be cut."

The gratifying moments, for Hunter, come often. One he cites:

"We had a Negro boy last year who was going to quit the team because he had been refused service at a concession stand in one of the league parks. He came to me the next day and said he was going home.

"Before he left, I sat him down and compared his experience with some of the unpleasant things that had happened to Jackie Robinson when he was breaking into the majors . . . I said if he was going to let one incident make him quit, he didn't belong in the majors.

"The kid thought it over, and decided to stay. He's playing in the Northwest this year and has a good chance to make it all the way."

WHITNEY VICTORY

Kelso Continues Racing Mastery

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y. (AP)—Mrs. Richard C. DuPont's mighty Kelso continued his mastery of the handicap ranks when he packed 130 pounds to an easy victory in the 36th running of the $50,000-added Whitney before 20,000 at Saratoga Saturday.

The 6-year-old son of Your Host on his way to his fourth Horse of The Year title, looped the leaders on the far turn, then made a powerful stretch run under Ismael Valenzuela. He finished the mile and an eighth on a fast but dull track in 1:50 2-5.

Mrs. J. Deaver Alexander's Saidam, with Bill Boland up, was second, 2½ lengths back of the champion, and a length before Townsend B. Martin's Sunrise County. The latter in turn was a head in front of Harbor View Farm's Garwol.

Guadalcanal, Whiteborough and Kilmoray completed the field. There were two scratches—Try Cash and Smart.

Kelso, a prohibitive favorite, paid $2.70, $2.40 and $2.20. Saidam returned $4.90 and $2.80. Sunrise County, ridden by Bill Hartack, was $2.50 to show.

The DuPont gelding, second on the all-time money list, earned $36,270 from the gross of $5,000 This increased his total to $1,343,308. The all-time leader is Round Table with $1,749,869.

Following the race, Mrs. DuPont was presented with a trophy by C. V. Whitney, after whose family the stakes was named. The Whitneys have been associated with the Saratoga sport since the turn of the century.

Kelso earlier this year won the Seminole, Gulfstream Park, John B. Campbell, Nassau County and Suburban. He spotted his rivals from 12 to 20 pounds Saturday.

A notable absentee was Carry Back, now in training after serving a season in stud at Ocala, Fla.

Carry Back, however, worked between races, going seven easy furlongs in 1:25 2-5. His first big objective in his comeack whirl will be the Buckeye Handicap at Randall Park, Ohio on Aug. 17.

MARKING TIME

NEW YORK (UPI) — More young people are wearing watches than ever before, according to a recent survey, and the timepieces are costing less than ever.

More than half the watches bought in the past year were for people under 20. The report, by Bulova Watch Co., showed. About 70 per cent of the watches purchased in the United States cost less than $30, with the median purchase price for watches now about $22, compared to $50 five years ago.

Wild Card Rally Beats Narwhal At Ocean City

LAUREL, Md. (AP) — After being shut off as late as the eighth pole, Harry J. O'Shea's Wild Card rallied for a neck win over Anthony Tornetta's Narwhal in the $10,000 Ocean City Handicap at Laurel Saturday.

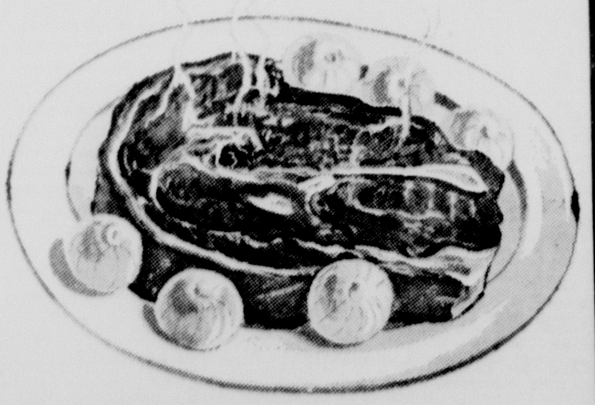

Jacinto Vasquez, leading rider of the meeting, was aboard his fourth winner of the program when he got Wild Card out of trouble in time to ride out the 1 1-16-miles on grass in 1:45 2-5. Wild Card, a son of Arctic Prince was the favorite and paid $3.80, $2.60 and $2.20.

Narwhal, who also came from off the pace, finished a length in front of Mr. Steu. He paid $4 and $3 and Mr. Steu returned $2.60.

VanderKelen Named Most Valuable Star

CHICAGO (AP) — Wisconsin's Ron VanderKelen, the late-blooming quarterback the pros ignored, was named the most valuable player Saturday in the College All-Stars' 20-17 upset of the National Football champion Green Bay Packers.

VanderKelen collected 38 of the 95 votes cast by sports experts who watched the remarkable Badget puncture the Packer bubble with his deadly passing which produced the big play of the game Friday night.

The 6-foot-1, 180-pound VanderKelen, signed as a free agent by the Minnesota Vikings after all 14 NFL clubs shunned him in their December draft, is a resident of the Packers' home base, Green Bay, Wis.

It was far from a one-man all-star show in the balloting, with big end Bob Jenks of Miami of Ohio, who kicked two field goals, pushing Vandy with 24 votes and a record total of 15 collegians sharing the widespread vote.

Also named were line backers Lee Roy Jordan of Alabama, Danny Brabham of Arkansas and Bobby Bell of Minnesota; defensive backs Larry Glueck of Villanova and Tommy Janik of Texas A & I; halfbacks Charley Mitchell of Washington and Larry Ferguson of Iowa; fullback Bill Thornton of Nebraska; quarterback Glynn Griffing of Mississippi; defensive tackles Jim Dunaway of Mississippi, Don Brum of Purdue and Fred Miller of Louisiana State; and offensive guard Ed Budde of Michigan State.

Jordan and Budde were co-captains of the All-Stars, who outrushed the favored Packers 141-96 yards and outpassed them 183 to 169 for the first collegiate triumph since the 35-19 decision over the Detroit Lions in 1958.

No ballot totals beyond the top two choices were announced.

Of all the All-Star heroics, VanderKelen's completion of a 73-yard scoring pass to Badger teammate end Pat Richter with three minutes left provided the big thrill for the Soldier Field crowd of 65,000.

That put the All-Stars ahead 20-10 and was the back-breaker for the struggling Packers, whose big guns, passer Bart Starr and plunging Jim Taylor, were thoroughly spiked.

VanderKelen, sharing the quarterback spot with Griffing, completed 9 of 11 passes for 141 yards.

VanderKelen didn't blaze into the headlines—although a season-long standout for Big Ten champion Wisconsin last fall—until his sensational Rose Bowl performance in a losing cause against Southern California New Year's Day.

That was several weeks after the NFL draft in which some clubs listed VanderKelen as a fair defense halfback prospect, but none sought his services.

After the Rose Bowl game, Vandy was a hot item on the pro market, finally signing with the Minnesota Vikings to whom he reported this weekend at Bemidji, Minn.

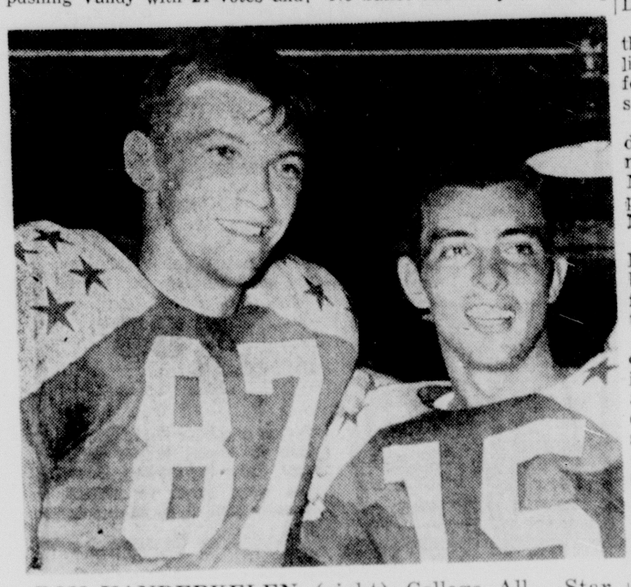

Viking Coach Norm Van Brocklin, a former star pro quarterback, said "VanderKelen confirmed everything that we thought about him.

The All-Star victory must go down as one of the great upsets in modern football history," he added. "Vandy did a tremendous job and will help us this season, along with Paul Flatley (Northwestern flanker back who played in the All-Star game)."

The quiet-spoken VanderKelen, 23, lauded his All-Star mates, singling out Budde and Dave Behrman of Michigan State, Clemson's Don Chuy and Ohio State's Daryl Sanders and Bob Vogel.

"Those boys did a great job up front and gave me a lot of time to pass," he said.

"I can't say anything about the Packers. You know we Vikings have to play them twice this season."

IN ST. PAUL OPEN

Young Jack Rule Continues To Roll

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP)—Young Jack Rule, finding confidence in his new aggressive type of game, forged nearer his first victory as a professional Saturday as he shot a seven-under-par 65 that opened up a seven-stroke margin in the $35,000 St. Paul Open Golf Tournament.

The former University of Iowa star from Cedar Rapids had a 54-hole total of 193. He moved well out ahead of Fred Hawkins of El Paso, Tex., who also shot a 65 for a three round total of 200.

Rule's 193 broke by six strokes the lowest 54-hole total of the year in PGA tournaments. His seven-stroke lead equalled the widest margin any player has had at that stage of a tournament this year.

Rule has had rounds of 67-61-65 over the comparatively trouble-free Keller course, a 6,567-yard, par-72 layout that many of the big name golfers shun.

Tied in third place at 205 were Bruce Devlin and Bruce Crampton, both of Sydney, Australia, and Tommy Jacobs of Bermuda Dunes, Calif.

Alone at 206 was Claude King of Virginia Beach, Va., who shot his second straight 67. Jerry Pittman of Tulsa, Okla., who started the day in second place four shots behind Rule, skied to a 76 Saturday and had 208, to tie with three others.

Rule is within two strokes of the 25-under par St. Paul Open record set by Mike Souchak in 1958, when he fired a 263. The 24-year-old Rule needs only a 69 in the final round Sunday to break that record.

He called the first hole the key to his round Saturday. He had to scramble to salvage a par after cutting the dogleg on the 342-yard hole and landing in a trap near the green. He blasted out poorly, chipped seven feet away and sank his putt.

Rule, who says he decided earlier this year to drop his 'safe' game and play more aggressively, carved out two birdies on the first nine including a 40-foot putt, and five on the back nine.

In moving into second place with a 16-under-par 200, Hawkins show a six-under-par 30 on the second nine after an opening 35.

Don Fairfield of Perdido Bay, Fla., who was in third place after two rounds, slumped to a 73 for a 207 total. Defending champion Doug Sanders, who barely made the halfway cut at par 144, withdrew from the tourney Saturday because of a back injury.

The losers were temporarily ahead after the top of the fifth but Rotary moved in with four runs in the bottom of the inning for a one run lead and clinched the victory with two more scores in the sixth.

SAYS CHIEFS MENTOR

'Psycho' Is Greatest Linebacker In Game

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — His coach calls him the "greatest middle linebacker in the business," and his teammates call him "psycho."

He's Sherill Headrick of the Kansas City Chiefs, formerly the Dallas Texans and champions of the American Football League.

"I don't know what happens to me when I get in a game," Headrick said. "I guess I get a little over-anxious. They call me 'psycho,' and I guess that's as good a word as any."

Whatever it is, all of Headrick's teammates and most players in the AFL agree that the 26-year-old linebacker is a bundle of ferociousness.

"He just plays with reckless abandon," said head coach Hank Stram. "Sherill has absolutely no concern about his physical safety in a game. He's a great competitor."

Savage Tackler

The former Texas Christian University player has been an All-AFL selection the past three years. His thumbnail sketch in the Chief's brochure says he is a "savage tackler, quick and aggressive, and a good pass defender."

Headrick ran back two interceptions for touchdowns in 1961 and came up with three key intercepts last season.

He reported to the Chiefs last month weighing 228 pounds, the heaviest he ever has been. Stram thinks his star linebacker is slightly overweight and promises "to let some of the air out of the balloon."

Headrick must look too heavy to Stram, who signed him in 1960 when he weighed only 185 pounds —pitifully small for a professional linebacker.

Popular Teammate

"I'm not exactly a clothes horse, and besides, I don't match things very well," he said.

Headrick, a native of Fort Worth, Tex., played prep football at Northside High School there. He was a fullback then. At TCU, he was a guard as a freshman, a fullback as a sophomore and back as a guard as a junior.

Pro Football Training Briefs

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP)—The St. Louis football Cardinals went through a rousing scrimmage here Saturday with veteran halfback John David Crow leading the way by running for two touchdowns and passing for a third.

Rookie defensive lineman Fate Echols, Billie Wilson and Ed Scrutchins drew praise from Coach Wally Lemm for their performance.

Coach Bill McPeak was exceptionally pleased with the running game that saw James and Barnes reel off several long runs. McPeak was not pleased with his pass offense. Quarterbacks George Izo and Galen Hall alternated plays during the 45-minute scrimmage. Quarterback Norman Snead, on duty with the National Guard at neary Indiantown Gap, Pa., was on the sidelines and did not play.

HIRAM, Ohio (AP)—Jim Ninowski and Frank Ryan shared the quarterbacking chores, and did all the signal calling Saturday as the Cleveland Browns ran through the only intra-squad game on their pre-season schedule.

Coach Blanton Collier, who will be calling most of the signals when the regular season opens, said he thought the offensive unit did very well, although the defense, as usual, is ahead of the offensive unit at this stage of training.

The defensive unit pulled out all stops.

'I'm telling you, they were all fired up,' said Collier.

PEEKSKILL, N.Y. (AP) — Quarterback Lee Grosscup, working a half game for each team, threw two touchdown passes Saturday as the Greens defeated the Whites 14-7 in the New York Jets' first intrasquad football game.

Grosscup threw a nine-yard strike to end Glen Knight for the Greens in the first half and clicked with flanker Don Maynard on a 45-yard scoring pass for the Whites in the second half. The Greens' second touchdown came when linebacker Ed Cooke ran 24 yards to score after intercepting a pass from quarterback Johnny Green.

Coach Weeb Ewbank described himself as well pleased with the scrimmage, adding 'I think our quarterbacks found out we have some pretty good pass protection. When they stayed in the pocket, they did all right.'

PITTSBURGH (AP)—The defense outscored the offense 19-18 in the Pittsburgh Steelers' first controlled intrasquad football before 6,500 fans at suburban Mt. Lebanon Saturday night.

The offense tallied three touchdowns but were beaten when the defense scored more points under Coach Buddy Parker's unique scoring system.

Veteran quarterback Ed Brown hit halfback Gary Ballman on a 58-yard scoring pass and rookie quarterback Bill Nelsen of Southern California tossed a 25-yard TD pass to Preston Carpenter.

Glenn Glass tallied a TD for the defense when he intercepted a pass and ran it back 45 yards.

BALTIMORE (AP)—Bob Boyd picked off a Johnny Unitas pass midway through the final quarter and ran 45 yards for the winning touchdown as the Whites defeated the Blues 17-13 in the 11th annual Baltimore Colts intrasquad game Saturday night.

A crowd of 36,976 turned out on the humid night, paying $1 apiece to watch the scrimmage. The profits from the game go to the Baltimore Police boys clubs.

With the Blues leading 13-1, Boyd intercepted a Unitas pass intended for end Jimmy Orr and sped down the sidelines for the winning score.

Unitas completed 14 of 19 passes for 165 yards, including six to Ray Berry for 85 yards. Lamar McHan gained 96 yards on five completions while Gary Cuozzo, playing for both sides, completed four of 12 for 15 yards.

BEMIDJI, Minn. (AP)—A sputtering football offense ran into trouble Saturday night as the Minnesota Vikings defense halted the offense 56-25 in a controlled scrimmage.

The youngest defensive unit in the National Football League had little trouble in stopping the offense cold before a crowd of 3,200.

One bright spot in the attack was the running of Bill Brown. The former Illinois star gained 61 yards in 14 carries.

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The Detroit Lions staged an intrasquad scrimmage game Saturday night before 7,000 pro football fans at Wisner Stadium and the offense won 24-18.

The offensive team's winning margin came on points with a fake field goal attempt and a 30-yard touchdown pass from Earl Morrall to Larry Vargo.

Morrall had 11 completions out of 23 attempts for 256 yards and three touchdowns. Milt Plum had four completions out of nine attempts and gained 154 yards.

Tigers' Wood On Hurt List

DETROIT (AP) — The Detroit Tigers placed injured second baseman Jake Wood on the disabled list Saturday and purchased George Smith from their Syracuse farm club.

Wood dislocated a joint in the middle finger of his left hand July 25 while swinging his bat. The injury failed to respond to treatment and he is scheduled to undergo surgery Monday.

Smith, a 25-year-old second baseman, was batting .224 for Syracuse. He will report to the Tigers Sunday.

Oral Protectors Cutting Prep Football Injuries

NEW YORK (AP)—Required use of mouth protectors is cutting down high school football injuries, according to figures of the National Federation of State High School Athletic Associations.

The Federation's study showed that the mandatory wearing of the protectors sliced high school football injuries to mouth and teeth by 50 per cent last year. Mouth and teeth injuries had accounted for 21 per cent of all football injuries.

A mouth protector covers the upper and lower teeth with a rubber compound. Stock mouth protectors, which may be widely used this year, are kept in place by a spring action which allows freedom in breathing and talking.

Front of the delicately draped skirt was accented by appliqes of embroidered Alencon lace. A queen's crown of seed pearls and iridescent sequins held her double tiered veil of imported English illusion. She carried a cascade bouquet of white tuberoses centered with a yellow-throated white orchid.

Mrs. Joseph E. Wheeler Jr. served as matron of honor and Mrs. Robert F. McDowell was bridesmaid. They wore identical gowns of yellow silk organza, fashioned with scoop necklines, brief sleeves and floating panels of gold organza falling from organza rosettes. Circular maline veils attached to yellow rosette discs formed their headpieces and they carried bouquets of yellow California Killian daisies.

Dresses Hide Under Jackets, Coats For Fall

A funny thing happened to the dress on the way to the fall collections. It kind of disappeared for day, only to turn up in its longest, most elegant form for evening.

The day dress, once the mainstay of women's wardrobes, has all but disappeared on its own. All the traditional dress designers are doing costumes. But all the suit designers are doing costumes, too. So the dress is actually around as much as ever, but now it's part of an ensemble with a coat or jacket.

As a result, dress designing has dropped to the lowest point in fashion history. There is only one dress silhouette for fall, a sinuous, semifitted shift with a high, unbelted waist. Variations are merely details on this silhouette. Only two dresses stand out as to be worn for themselves, a double-breasted coat-dress and a shift jumper worn with a white crepe or satin blouse.

But the general fashion effect is that of a dress which hides beneath a coat, a sleeveless coat, a jacket or a vest. Only in the evening do dresses blaze forth. Here, too, the silhouette is narrow, but fluid and supple, easy to wear, not constricting. It may be plain crepe or jeweled solidly, but it is always long. The cocktail dress has again been relegated to before - evening hours.

Italian Bags Are Noted For Workmanship

By FLORENCE de SANTIS

The country which first made tooled leather a high art hasn't lost its skill. The fine Italian hand is as fine as ever when it's comes to handbag design and workmanship.

Many of the finest leather handbags sold here are made in Italy for American firms. Each bag is made entirely by one workman, using skills which can still be found only in Italy. The French are still tops in beaded and petit point bags.

Among top Italian names in handbags are Gucci, Gherardini and Paolacci. Hand-stitching, burnished edges, exceptionally beautiful coloring in the leathers are the hallmarks of their work. With such skills, they can then design to perfection styles like slender envelopes that hold a lot, or combine leathers and furs in delicate perfection.

Flower girl was Miss Christy Ann Brown, who wore a full-skirted frock of crystalline taffeta with matching headdress and carried a circular pouf of glamellias, gladioli and lily of the valley.

Serving as best man for his brother was Jerome W. Malek and groomsmen were Arden Jess Smith, David Conrad Sharp and Jake Malek. Ushers were Darryl Reed and Glynn David Roberts and acting as ring bearer was Arden B. Smith II.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Kirkland wore an aqua silk sheath with paneled overskirt and fitted lace bodice with elbow length sleeves. She wore accessories to match and a white orchid corsage. The bridegroom's mother wore a champagne chiffon sheath with matching accessories and a mint green orchid corsage.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the American Legion Home in Oak Grove, where tall baskets of gladioli and stock formed a background. The guest book was placed beside a white memory candle which glowed with a green flame. Tables were covered with mint green cloths overlaid with white lace. Centering the bride's table was the tiered wedding cake, with the attendants' bouquets on the corners. A mass arrangement of white roses and stock graced the refreshment table from which punch was served.

The bride will reside with her parents and teach until next May when Mr. Malek receives his discharge from the navy after which they will establish a home in Ruston. Mrs. Malek was graduated from Forest high school and from Louisiana Polytechnic Institute in Ruston. A graduate of Tioga high school, Mr. Malek attended Louisiana Tech.

Modern Woman Is A Paradox Says Authority

CHICAGO (UPI) — County Kelly Hockmeyer, Irish-born authority on women, says the American woman is the most dynamic creature in the world today — but a paradox!

In his words — "She knows how to give herself a home permanent but not how to make homemade soups. She takes care of an office job as well as her home and family, but she complains that she's really not expressing herself completely. She's willing to support her husband, raise his children, and take care of his home, but she believes any authority who tells her that the American woman is a poor wife."

AUGUST 16 is the date chosen for their wedding by Miss Rosalyn Richardson and Delmas Lyles, whose approaching marriage is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Richardson of Jonesboro. He is the son of Mrs. Mildred Lyles and the late Mr. Lyles of Ansley. The wedding will take place at the Dexter Church of God in Dexter, Missouri with Rev. W. F. Unsell officiating. The couple will establish a home in West Monroe.

Mix Colors In Table Linens

For instance, on s sunny yellow cloth place napkins of nile green, orange, brown, deep green, deep gold . . . different for each guest or "color paired" for instant place cards at a dinner table. Good colored table linens are vat dyed so all these colors (plus white too) can be safely washed together with no danger of color transfer or fading.

Art Appears On Ski Wear

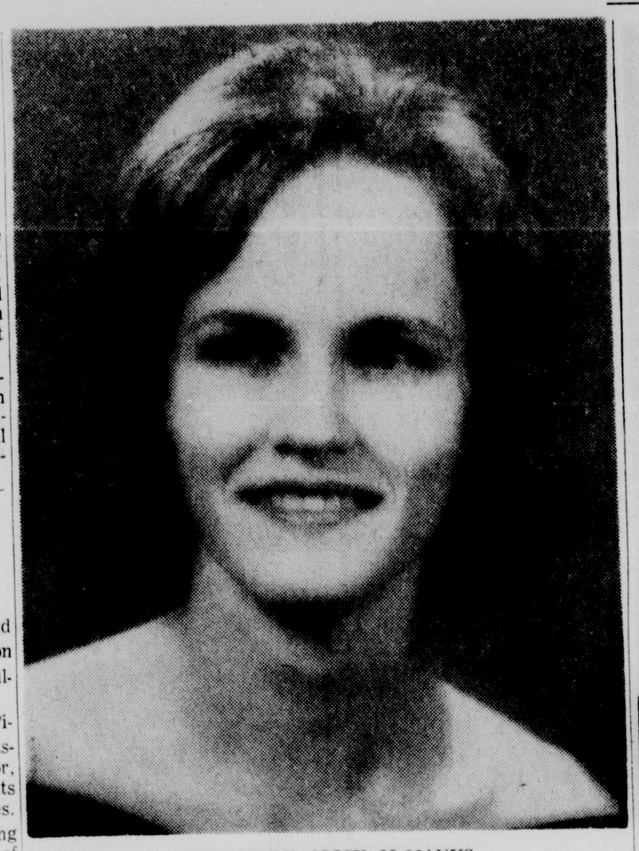

Fashion conscious skiers had better be careful lest they fall on their Picassos, and what a cultural peccadillo that would be.

These in turn are now being sewn into an artistic array of shirts, ankle-length culottes, ponchos, sweat shirts, jackets by an enterprising California company. He paints on fabrics ranging from plushy piles and poplins to silks, cotton knits and corduroys.

Ah, summer. Only compensations for heat and humidity in these parts are parties for out of town visitors and reports from our travelers about glamorous spots around the world.

Several parties this week have honored teen - age visitors ANDREA SUDDUTH and EVIE KNIGHT of Vicksburg, Mississippi, here as guests of their cousin, SALLY SUDDUTH, at the family home on Frances Place. On Monday afternoon, SUSAN JACKA entertained at a come-as-you-are party, with guests arriving in whatever they were wearing when phoned earlier in the day. Attire included pajamas, a bathing suit, shorts or pedal pushers, and one outfit of Sunday dress and heels, worn by one who had attended early church.

A conversational hour was the compliment planned by DEBBY HOLDEN for Thursday afternoon. The party was held at the Holden home on John circle. Twelve girls, all attired in sports clothes, came for an afternoon of card-playing, conversation, and eating.

Friday's hostess was JANET BRUECK, who invited the guests for luncheon at home. The table was centered with an epergne filled with fruit. The menu included fresh fruit cup, shrimp Creole and salad, and for dessert, biscuit tortoni. Also named guests of honor for this party were LINDA MENDLESOHN of Baton Rouge, who is visiting POLLY SHLOSMAN and ELSIE HENINGER; and SHARON JACOBS, guest of CHARLENE SMITH and CLARA KAPLAN.

Saturday evening Sally planned a party at home honoring her visitors. Twenty boys and girls were invited for an early evening swim, with supper served later. The buffet menu included barbecued ham, with cold meats for sandwiches, assorted dips, and other finger foods, with bottled soft drinks. The den was cleared for dancing to the juke box.

Small informal affairs continued all this week for ELIZABETH JAMES, of Overland Park, Kansas, popular guest of LESSIE GARRETT. Last Saturday MARGUERITE GORDON was hostess for luncheon at the Lotus club. Later in the afternoon the visitor was honored at a tea in the home of LUCILLE TURPIN with Lessie and VERGIE SUE SMITH of Bastrop, co-hostesses.

At this party, pink roses were used with tuberoses in a crystal and silver epergne centering the dining room table. Strawberry punch was served from the cutglass punch bowl at one end of the table; while opposite was the silver bowl filled with Lucille's marvelous iced coffee.

On Monday, a group motored to Bastrop for luncheon at the home of FRANCES and GEORGE T. MADISON . . . . CAROL LAYTON was hostess Tuesday morning, inviting a few friends of the visitor in for coffee at Layton Castle . . . . ELOISE SLATOR's compliment was luncheon at the Lotus club on Tuesday, while DOROTHEA and DAVE GARRET entertained at dinner at Bayou DeSiard country club.

Wednesday's calendar included luncheon at the home of ANNETTE DREW . . . . and later, a boat ride on the river with CORALYNN and FLOOD GARRETT. . . .Dessert was served in the late afternoon, when DOROTHY SHOLARS invited the visitor to her home. Another out of town guest at this affair was STELLA DRYBURGH's sister, ADDIE FRYE from Tennessee.

Cafe au lait was served Thursday morning by RUTH and BUDDY MADISON at their home. Later Lessie and Elizabeth were included with ETHEL BOARDMAN's bridge club for luncheon at the Boardman home . . . . . MARGERY M'HENRY honored Elizabeth and Virgie Sue Smith at luncheon at her home on the Columbia road Friday at noon. Fresh garden flowers in shades of lavender, dahlias, crepe myrtle, and stripped banana stalks, decorated the living room. In the dining room, where twelve guests were seated, the table was centered with pink crepe myrtle arranged with white stock and chrysanthemums. A salad plate which included chicken salad, asparagus in sour cream, and peach pickle was served, with peach parfait for dessert.

Due home at the end of this week is SUSAN JOHNS, presently on the high seas aboard the S.S. America. Susan has enjoyed a fabulous trip to Europe, in company with five other teen-agers and Susan's aunt, STELLA PHARES of Shreveport. Ecstatic letters have been received by friends and relatives describing the trip, with interesting high spots at each stop. In London, the group were fortunate enough to be standing at the gate of Buckingham Palace when Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip drove out . . . At a town in the French provinces, near the Belgium border, the group were overnight guests of the Selliers family and had a real French-type dinner, served in many courses at ten p.m.

In Vienna, and again in Venice, the group were met by cousins stationed overseas who showed them the sights in each city . . . . And in Paris, RENEE CHESNAIS, who was once stationed in Monroe at Selman Field, took the girls on a breathtaking sight-seeing tour which included lunch at a sidewalk cafe, dinner at an old French restaurant, the son and lumiere exhibition at Notre Dame, and a day at Versailles.

Our travelling Boy Scout, WARREN KLAM, is now settled in Athens, Greece, at the Jamboree; will be there through next weekend. His trip over included stops at London, Lucerne, and Venice; the return is to be by way of Rome and Lucerne again.

Home again are FRANCES ADCOCK, her daughter JAN, and Jan's friend LYNN NELSON of Jackson, Mississippi, who have just completed a three weeks' trip to Hawaii. Last week they went to Duke Kahanamoku's restaurant for dinner and an Hawaiian floor show. CHERRY CHAPMAN, a student at the University of Hawaii this summer, joined the group for dinner.

Big League ball games are the magnet drawing our people to St. Louis at this time of year. This week Monroe visitors supporting the Cardinals were PAT and STAN BAGWELL, JANE and ALLEN BARHAM, JERRY and C. D. OAKLEY, JR. Flying up to join them for the weekend were CLETA and CARL MURRAY of Crockett, Texas. They are due home tonight.

On his sixth birthday Monday, RICHARD KUTNER was honored with a hobo birthday party. Invitations mailed to fifteen little boys featured original poems and drawings of hobo bandannas on sticks. On arrival, each received a bandanna as a favor and the group went for a hike along the bayou bank. An older friend, PAUL MARX, assisted Richard's mother with games when the group returned to the house. Hamburger supper, followed by ice cream and birthday cake, was served chuckwagon style at a table featuring Bandanna tablecloth and napkins.

PAUL NEIGHBORS and his orchestra will play for dancing at Bayou DeSiard country club's summer formal this coming Saturday night, August 10. This popular band is always well received in its appearances in Monroe. The party itself, providing one of summer's few excuses for dressing up, is always a gala event on the club calendar.

Yet you are not evil when you seek gain for yourself.

For when you strive for gain you are but a root that clings to the earth and sucks at her breast.

Surely the fruit cannot say to the root, "Be like me, ripe and full and ever giving of your abundance."

But you who are strong and swift, see that you do not limp before the lame, deeming it kindness.

In your longing for your giant self lies your goodness, and that longing is in all of you.

But let not him who longs much say to him who longs little, "Wherefore are you slow and halting?"

For the truly good ask not the naked, "Where is your garment?" nor the houseless "What has befallen your house?"

Hubka Home Scene Of Sorority Supper Party

The lawn at the home of Mr. and V. A. Hubka, 1406 McGuire, was scene of an al fresco supper last Saturday night to entertain members of Beta Pi Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi, their husbands and guests. The Hubka's daughter, Miss Toni Hubka, assisted in the courtesies.

Supper was served buffet style from a long table, centered with three brandy snifters in which floated blue pompon chrysanthemums. White satin ribbons and pompons were entwined at the base of the snifters.

Guests for the occasion were Mr. and Mrs. Perry Meiers, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Truett, J. Fontana and Tom Coleman.

Members and their husbands present included Mr. and Mrs. Carl Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Alvis Gossett, Mr. and Mrs. Bob De-Moss, Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow Bailey, Mr. and Mrs. Norman H. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Schempf, Miss Gyl Rowell and the Hubkas.

Back-To-School Togs Play Up Fashion Details

They love shirts in solids, long sleeves with convertible or button down collars in fall tone shades such as celery green, gold, cream, white, pink, blue and grey. Shirts also pick up autumn garden and drum prints in fall-trend colors as well as a fine London stripe shirting, perfect with the button-down collar.

They're stretching out in the most unusual way. Stretch fabrics are in firm control of the situation this season as they appear in a solid, check and glen plaid patterns.

They're popping out in surprise quilted fabrics. Many vests and tops offer madras and paisley in new-use quilted fabrics that combine lightness-with just enough bulk and warmth for activity or lounging.

Shorty wraps and culottes are more popular than ever by a landslide majority vote. They're buying companion pieces from large fabric groups and mixing these items with coordinates from other groups. For example: flannel pairs with plaid or with itself in tone on tone. Heather plaid tops heather solids, herringbone teams up with fleck tweed.

STURDY SHOE LOOK

Evening Gown Look Seen In Fall Wedding Dresses

By FLORENCE de SANTIS

Bridal gowns for early fall weddings have capitulated completely to the evening gown look. Except for the color, it is often impossible to tell bridal gowns from any of the slim, lovely long gowns being shown as formals.

"Today's bride wants to follow the path shown her by royal brides of recent years," said Murray Hamburger at his recent showing of the fall bridal collection. "She knows that regal simplicity creates the frame for her beauty."

Mr. Hamburger knows what he's talking about. Almost single-handed he took the whole bridal market down a new path after Princess Margaret's wedding a few years ago.

Bridal designers and buyers almost unanimously declared that Princess Margaret's shockingly simple gown would ever be adopted by brides. Mr. Hamburger brought out a copy in four days for a big store, has happily been on top of the new trend ever since.

His fall star, for instance, goes boldly into the present evening trend of long coat and gown. The coat is collarless and fastened only at the high empire waist. The front edges are bordered with beautiful embroidered appliques, sleeves are long and tight. The dress beneath is pure, unadorned shape, sleeveless and with a bateau neck, empire-waisted. The skirt is flattened in front, more sweeping in back. The train, by the way, is part of the coat.

The entire ensemble, minus the coat's train, would go out for formal evenings quite easily. This spirit inspires the whole collection. Mr. Hamburger feels that brides now prefer gowns that can be used again, not to speak of bridesmaids.

Decoration is restrained to logical places on designs. A slim long torso sheath will have embroidered sleeves. Jackets will be beaded over dresses which repeat the beading only in a neckline border. Appliques rim hemlines only, or perhaps repeat on the train.

Of course, as Mr. Hamburger points out, back views of a bridal party are as important as the front. He has some particularly dramatic backs, as in his Spanish cape dress. The cape is gathered onto the neck, the folds dropping to the floor in regal purity.

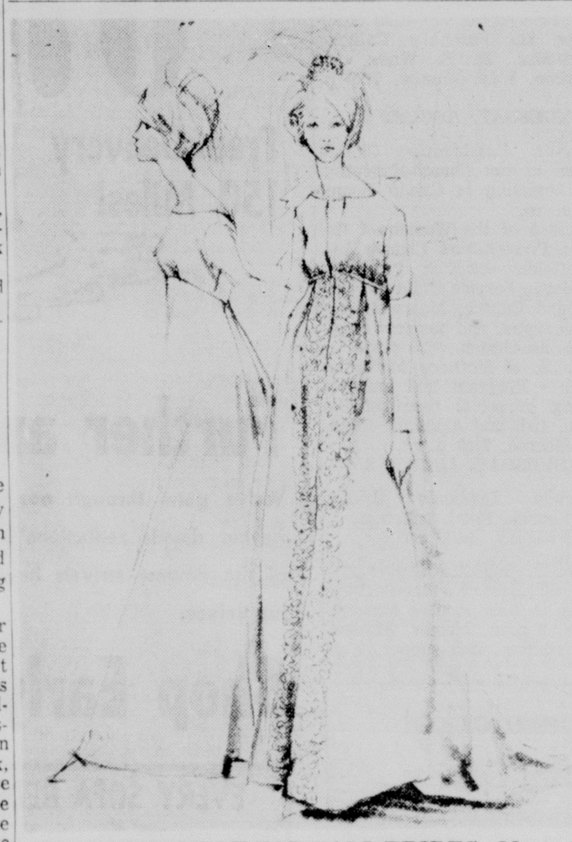

Two of his prettiest styles for young brides are also among the simplest. Mr. Hamburger doesn't believe that the lily of youth needs a lot of gilding. One is a bell-shaped skirt dress, with a suggestion of a flat panel treatment in front, a simple top low in back, other is a tiny - sleeved empire topper for the wedding itself. The other is a tiny - sleeves empire with velvet ribbon sash whose streamers fall to the hemline.

SHEERIER SHEERS

MISS VESTA KAY PUCKETT, daughter of Mr. and and Mrs. Robert Lee Puckett of Oak Grove, will become the bride of Thomas Henry Benton, son of Mrs. Irma Benton and the late John Bernett Benton, 509 Bres Avenue, Monroe, on August 30. The ceremony will take place at 7 p.m. in the home of the bride's parents with Rev. Edsel Pippens officiating.

Recipes From Old Cookbook Ripe With Age

VERNON RIVER, P. E. I. (AP) — Edward Bowser, whose hobby is cooking, found an old cookbook recently while repairing his 100-year-old home, tried some of the recipes and says his family found the dishes delicious.

The old cookbook calls for few accurate measurements, leaning heavily on the teacup as a kitchen utensil. It specifies that you beat egg yolks in teacups, mix yeast in teacups and chop nuts and fruit in teacups.

TOMATO PIE — Peel and slice enough green tomatoes to fill one pie, add four tablespoonsful of vinegar, butter and sugar, flavor with nutmeg and bake slowly with two crusts. You may stew the tomatoes first to prevent the pie from being too juicy.

FRIED BANANAS — Peel and slice bananas, sprinkle with salt, dip in thin batter and fry in butter. Serve as soon as it is done.

Will She Or Won't She Sash

By FLORENCE de SANTIS

Pity the poor dress. This summer it's got down to the nadir, the absolute basic. It's two pieces put together with a hole for the head.

Sometimes it's called a shift, sometimes a skimmer, also a Lilly, and it hangs by the rackful in every store. It comes in cotton, in silk and in nylon jersey, in solids and prints of every hue. When put on it falls straight from the shoulders. And it's the uniform of the moment.

Does this sound dreary, lacking in all fashion glamor or suspense? Not so. The shift has drama — will she or won't she sash? They all come with a string thing that can make a waistline anywhere from bust to hip, or be left off altogether.

To this narrow choice has the dress come. Gilr-watching is reduced to sash and non-sash counting. It's time to start a rescue movement for the dress, once the ultimate expression of femininity.

LUG A COOLER

If you go quite a distance to shop for groceries in warm weather, pack the meat and dairy products in your portable picnic cooler to eliminate any chance of spoilage before you can get them home.

Supermarket Squint Costly

CHATTANOOGA (AP) — "Supermarket squint" costs merchants and housewives millions of dollars a year, the Southeast Tennessee Optomitric Society says.

Dr. C. Wayne Shearer, society president, says many shoppers have such poor vision that they pick up the wrong items. As a result, he said, packaging specialist have had to work out designs to appeal to the astigmatic.

He said one problem is that most shoppers with vision deficiences aren't aware of it. He urged an eye checkup at least once a year.

Create Unique Arrangement In Pitcher

Take three stocks, five carnations and a few bells of Ireland and just see what a lovely arrangement you can make of them in a pitcher you already have.

Gently curve the flowers of the design so they follow the imagined flow from the spout. To curve the stems, place both thumbs below the stalk, with fingers above. Then gently bend the stem several times, advises the Society of American Florists.

To make this arrangement, first crush chicken wire and insert it into the pitcher to hold the stems firmly. Then crush or mash the stem ends of the stocks, to allow more water to reach their blooms.

Next, insert three stocks of graduated heights. Wire the first two stocks together about an inch above the pitcher rim, to control the stems and keep them into position.

Then add the five carnations in stair - step fashion and fill out the design with green foliage, which will provide contrast. You'll be pleasantly surprised with the results, says the Society.

CURTAIN CALL

A very funny farce, "Send Me No Flowers," is now in rehearsal as the third and final offering of the Summer Theatre Festival. An advance reservation form will be mailed to last season's members within a few days and box office hours will also be announced shortly. Tickets will be $1.50 for adults and $1 for students. The show is scheduled to run from Friday, August 16, through Monday, August 19.

Executive director Richard M. Clark has drawn on comedy talent from previous shows for his leading roles, including Gail Sawyer, Arthur Griffith and Bob Evans of "Come Blow Your Horn," Beryl Franklin and Phil Lisotta of "Teahouse of the August Moon" and Bill Wells of the college production of "Brigadoon."

LAST UNTIL FALL

Following "Send Me No Flowers," Strauss Playhouse will be without a show for nearly two months until the first production of the fall season. Thus live theatre enthusiasts will not want to miss this comedy to tide them over until then. Besides it is full of laughs and just what the doctor ordered in the way of hot weather entertainment.

"The Indian Captive" was a huge success from both the artistic and entertainment standpoints. Nearly 900 children and their parents viewed the four performances. Mrs. C. H. McHenry's daughter and grandchildren arrived from Louisville in time for the last showing.

Three of the cast have tiles to show for it: Susan Golson as Eleanor Lytell, Bruce Harrison as Thomas Lytell and Suzanne Taylor as Deborah. Then as a birthday present Susan was given another brick for her appearance as Gretel last Christmas.

We now have 15 tiles waiting to be painted, but luckily we have two volunteers for lettering, Norma Brandle, and K. D. Hayes, so we expect them to be up before long. This would be a good time for others interested in Green Room tiles to place their orders.

CONGRATULATIONS

Congratulations to Henry Haas Jr., on his election as president of the state florist association. Roz and Henry are back from a west coast trip in the course of which they saw "The Committee," in San Francisco; "Wildcat", in Dallas, and several of the shows in Las Vegas. At "The Committee," they were joined by Regina Scherck and Scherk Bogen who also saw "How To Succeed In Business," in San Francisco.

It is none too early to be thinking about the coming membership season and Mary Lee Milam, vice president for this activity, is hard at work on plans. Last season's membership fell just short of the 3,000 mark, a new high record. If every member attended every play, we would have to run 12 performances to accommodate them all. Even though this never quite happens, we are getting to the point where increased membership would tax our resources.

The board of directors has therefore taken the significant action of limiting membership for the 1963-64 season to a top figure of 3,000. When this is reached, later applications will be placed on a waiting list. Last season's members will soon be solicited to renew, and right now membership in all categories is open for application from both old and new members. Anyone who wishes to apply may get in touch with Mrs. Milam at FAirfax 2-3535 or Mrs. H. L. Woods Jr. at FAirfax 3-0765.

UNDER THE SPELL of music are Hayley Mills, Burl Ives and Deborah Walley, stars of Walt Disney's Technicolor feature "Summer Magic." Also appearing in the film, which opens Wednesday at the Jim Theatre, are Dorothy McGuire, Peter Brown and Eddie Hodges.

Mid-Teens Activity Is Confusing

By DAVID NYDICK
UPI Education Specialist

The social activities of children in the middle teens sometimes are confusing to parents. A general understanding of their usual social behavior and needs will help adults to realize what should and should not be expected.

For instance, Ann, an attractive 16 - year - old high school student, has been a successful scholar and is quite active in extra-curricular activities. Her mother has been concerned about her social development.

Is the girl growing up too fast? Should she be going out on dates, attending dances, and be so interested in boys? The girl is concerned constantly with her appearance. She also has shown an extremely strong interest in various causes and supporting the underdog.

TYPICAL

These are typical characteristics of the desires of a girl in her middle teens. She takes an increasingly broader view of national and international affairs. She is searching for prestige among her peers and within the school. Her interests become more adult. She will gain satisfaction as a spectator at lectures and concerts. She becomes more dignified and displays increased self-control.

Her needs follow similar direction. She should be treated as an adult member of the family. She should be allowed to go to dances and on dates. Naturally, reasonable restrictions are in order. A dance should be properly chaperoned. Dates should be in groups with properly planned entertainment.

What about a boy of this age? His social interests and needs are very much the same. Physically, he has caught up with the girls. He still will be interested in sports as an active player. He will want to develop a strong body. He likes girls to be friendly, well-groomed, and to have a sense of humor.

GROUP BLOSSOMING

Parents who recognize and understand the characteristics and needs of their children in the middle teens will find their job much easier. This age group really is blossoming. They are anxious to be a part of the total society.

2 Versions Of Flower's Name Basis

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

There are two versions of the origin of the name of the showy hydrangea. One is that it stems from the fact that the rugged plant thrives on water. The other is that hydrangea is from the Greek for water vessel, referring to the shape of the fruit.

In any event, the hydrangea thrives on water and withstands the damp, salty weather of the coast.

The hydrangea is the official flower of several New Jersey communities. The Atlantic City Hydrangea Club has planted more than 37,000 plants since it was organized 18 years ago. The club has established the Hydrangea Trail, which winds through Atlantic City and into Ocean City where it splits into two routes.

COLD RESISTANT

Varieties of common hydrangea will withstand cold to 20 degrees below zero. Most of these are white or pink, and some turn blue in acid soil. These plants will benefit from chelated iron in the soil, especially if they appear to be yellowing. They prefer partial shade.

In far northern areas they should be heavily mulched, and cut back in the spring to improve summer bloom.

SOUTHERN GARDENER

Motifs Keyed To Season

By MRS. JOHN TOLAR

The Terra Firma Garden Club of West Monroe, presented the T. V. and Fifth District Garden Center program last Wednesday. The president, Mrs. A. T. Harrellson, and three of the members made very attractive arrangements for summertime home and party decorations. These were judged by a student flower show judge of the fifth district, Mrs. Leslie Clark, just before the noontime show.

Mrs. Harrellson scored 95 on her design featuring a lovely seashell for the container. The line material used to follow the diagonal line of the shell was wood's fern. Within this line she placed a row of soft pink carnations. To soften the carnation outline she placed a row of soft pink carnations. To soften the carnation outline she used the dried statice as a filler. The color of the statice (soft grey with pink) blended with the pink of the shell and the carnations perfectly. It was a lovely summer design.

BANANA BLOOMS

Mrs. Alan Roberson used exotic banana blooms with red canna leaves for her massed line design forming an asymetrical balanced arrangement. The container was a round brass footed bowl. This design also scored a blue ribbon (95). Canna leaves with long stems showing formed the line of the design. The buds of the banana plant on long stems showing small fruit forming along the stems served as the focal interest.

This design had a feeling of the oriental. Rocks covered the needle holder. Water showed at high level in the bowl —interpreting summer in the oriental manner. This type design integrates with space making this a free-standing attraction that would be cleverly used on a very large, low coffee table in a large room or on a patio table outside.

Mrs. Buddy Frantom combined luscious orange glads with apricot colored carnations to form a massed triangle design in a lovely round orange colored vase. Clipped palm was used as a background filler for the carnations that had been placed in diagonal rows within the triangle line of glads. Three of these were grouped at the central area to form the focal interest. This was a very striking color combination, very modern in feeling, thus ideal for today's modern home.

NATURALISTIC

Mrs. Walter Graves made a naturalistic design using driftwood and clipped pine for the primary placement (vertical) in a small natural colored salad bowl (wooden). Orange into gold colored zinnias filled in the line. One large orange colored zinnia was placed on an interesting base made of pressed wood squares (floor blocks). The brown into tan wood blended perfectly with the colors of the design. It would be perfect for the summer patio — long lasting, also.

The Terra Firma is a new garden club. Organized just a little over a year ago. This was a beautiful show. Talent of the arrangers certainly came to light. There is so much hidden talent among the garden club members, in old clubs as well as new clubs. If you haven't tried to make an arrangement for a show or even for your own home — do it soon. It is lots of fun. Originality plays an important part. Remember if it is pleasing — that is the first rule to follow.

If your talent is smothered just because you fail to use it — then shame on you. You are missing so much. Also, others are missing a lot of enjoyment by your failing to use a hidden talent. Train your talent — of course. We strive for perfection always in everything that is worthwhile. So — new garden club members everywhere — make a note of this. Make an arrangement soon — then another and on and on. Don't be afraid to start. This club, the Terra Firma, is a good example to follow.

MORE BOOKS

We've been fortunate to have three more books donated to our lending libaray by Mrs. V. S. Garnett; namely "Modern Shrubs," by E. H. Cox and P. A. Cox; "Window Sill Gardening in Town and Country," by James Underwood Crockett, and "Miniature Plants for Home and Greenhouse," by Elvin McDonald.

Note: All Federated Garden Clubs in Fifth District — will you please send your new president's name, address and zip code, number of members in the club to Mrs. Jettie Barnum, Fifth District Director, Jonesboro. She needs this information. Also, will each Federated Garden club please appoint a radio chairman within the club. She will work with our new district radio chairman, Mrs. Paul Bourg, Hodge. We are striving to use radio as a medium for club activities and a series of programs listed as "The Garden Club of the Air." Mrs. Bourg will tell you more about this when she receives the names of the radio chairmen. This information could be included with your president's name if you need to send this to Mrs. Barnum. Please let Mrs. Barnum hear from you soon.

Just a thought to leave with you. Why are you a member of a Garden Club? Mrs. S. A. Thompson of the Camden Garden Club, Camden, Arkansas, wrote in the Arkansas Gardener magazine that her love of flowers would be perhaps her first reason for being a member of a club. Then, later on she said that this love was not enough. "You know, a garden is contagious. You find many kindred souls, all having a desire for more knowledge gathered from others." The motto of her club (organized in 1935) was "To Make the Beautiful more Beautiful."

"The first news of God on earth was his walking in a garden, and the last news of Him was the same.

"Whoever makes a garden has, oh, so many friends!
The glory of the morning,
the dew when daylight ends.
For wind and rain and sunshine, and dew and fertile sod,

Back Yard Improved With Fence

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Most people want privacy, even when they have only a tiny plot of ground surrounding their home.

"We love our house, but our neighbor's backyard looks like a junk heap," writes a woman, "and everytime we sit with friends on our lawn, she has her wash blowing in our faces. My husband says it would cost too much to screen their yard out with trees, as we would need to get some six feet or taller if we'd make a hedge. Is there a better solution?"

Wooden fences do not need to look like hate walls. An attractive basket weave style fence made with wide boards and 2 by 4s woven through vertically could be pretty, and you could plant a few fast-growing trees in strategic spots to soften the look. Louvered designs with the boards placed in a vertical position have become popular in recent years. It is a good fence where you do not wish to shut out cool breezes, but would still like privacy. The same louver idea may be worked out horizontally.

WOVEN FENCES

If you want to have a fence higher than funds permit for materials, you could place horizontal boards on uprights, starting the boards about two feet above the ground. Foliage could be planted below taking up the slack left by the space and softening the lines of it. If you adopt this method, consider getting some of the inexpensive tiny evergreens in readiness to use as a border.

Another outdoor problem is this one:

"We'd like to do a little patio on the side of our house. My husband says he doesn't mind doing the work, and could do it in the fall. But just about anything worthwhile we want to do seems expensive. Bricks and flagstones would make the cost prohibitive as we would need to put a cement foundation down first. A wood deck wouldn't go with our fieldstone house," writes a new homeowner.

FOUNDATION

A cement foundation alone could do the trick as one couple discovered. When he had poured the cement, he decided to try an experiment based on an Oriental idea he had seen done with sand in a yard. He took a rake and threaded a wavelike pattern down the almost-dry length of the concrete, matching the entire area into a uniform series of the waves. He decided not to use flagstone, and as a matter of fact decorated the little patio in an Oriental theme house overhang, potted white pines, borders of bright flowers.

An indoor problem, from a reader:

"We have a handsome carved newel post in a home that is being torn down to make room for a road. It will not fit into our new home, but everyone advises taking it with us. My husband says it will just be another piece of baggage that will wind up in the cellar. I've heard people have these posts made into lamps. Do they stain or decorate them? This one is mahogany."

A very pretty grained wood would be used as it is. Some people add an eagle to the base of the lamp, giving an old look. But you can add a motif more suited to your furnishings, and in balance with the size of the post.

THIS IS a blossom of the new impatiens, called Tangerine for its bright color. There are small low-growing varieties of impatiens as well as taller ones. Colors also vary from red, rose, pink, white, scarlet-orange, and lavender to tangerine.

Check Mums For Ills

By AUDREY H. DAWSON

Mrs. Gardener, take a good look at your azaleas, they may show symptoms of several ills which can be corrected. Are the leaves turning yellow between the veins while the veins remain dark green? This is chlorosis and is caused by lack of iron.

Azaleas grow best in acid soils and when the soil is sufficiently acid the plants will not suffer an iron deficiency. However, when the soil is slightly alkaline, iron may be made unavailable to the plants. Chlorosis is especially prevalent when azaleas are planted in areas near sidewalks or buildings of masonry construction, because of the high amount of lime in the mortar used in construction.

If your plants are suffering from chlorosis apply aluminum sulfate at the rate of ¼ to ½ pounds per square yard of soil surface. Scatter or broadcast on top of the soil under and just beyond the spread of the branches of the plant. Do not try to work the material into the soil because you may damage the root system.

DAMAGE CAUSED

The mealy bug causes considerable damage to azaleas during the summer months. It may not be noticed until a dark gray or black sooty mold fungus appears on the leaves of the plants. The best control for the mealy bug is to spray with malathion. The red spider is another insect which damages azaleas. Use malathion or dusting sulphur to control this pest.

POISON IVY

Each year many adults, and many more children are infested by poison ivy and poison oak. These plants are easy to identify and the ability to recognize these plants wherever and however they grow can save you a lot of discomfort. Previous escape is no proof of immunity. The leaves of these plants always grow in groups of three. The upper surface of the leaves is very shiny. The flowers and fruit are in clusters on slender stems that originate at the axis of the leaves. The fruits usually have a white, waxy appearance, according to plant scientists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The form in which the plants grow varies considerably throughout the U. S. They may grow as a woody vine attached to a tree, as a trailing shrub, mostly on the ground or as erect woody shrub. They may flourish in the deep woods where the soil is moist or in very dry soil on hillsides.

COOKING APPLIANCES

Four automatic portable cooking appliances can substitute for an electric range, and the utensils to use with it cost less according to home economists in the Housing and Equipment laboratory of the Agricultural Research Service. The four electric appliances used in the research were a three quart saucepan, five quart saucepan, fry pan and portable oven — costing a total of $116.

Used for comparison were a 30 inch electric range, an ordinary fry pan, three quart and five quart saucepan costing $165. to $275, depending on type range selected. The four portable appliances cost less to operate. The home economists learned this by cooking two types of meals, one fairly simple and the other more elaborate, but involving several processes, such as boiling, simmering, baking and frying. The portable appliances required less electricity, but more time than the range, when the same menu was cooked on both. Electricity for cooking the more elaborate meal once a day for a year would cost about $8 less for the portable appliances than the range at 2.5 cents a kilowatt hour and $9.75 less at 3 cents a kilowatt hour.

Here's the Answer

QUESTION: I would like to buy a table saw of the kind that used circular blades. The range of prices seems to be very wide. Is there some way I can tell whether I am getting my money's worth?
ANSWER: You buy a table saw the same way you buy almost anything else: by comparing what you are getting in one product with what you are getting in another — and then deciding whether the price difference makes the first or second product a better purchase. You have to look over the machine personally, see if you can detect which is built better and which has more useful features.

But probably the most important of all is to find out exactly what you are getting for your money. The prices of some table saws include blade guards and other equipment necessary to the proper functioning of the tool. Other prices, for machines which appear to be better buys, actually are for "stripped - down" models. The reputation of the manufacturer and the reliability of the dealer are, of course, also important.

Remember that hte so-called size of the machine is indicated by the size of the maximum saw blade that can be used. Thus, a 7-inch saw will take a 7-inch blade, an 8-inch blade, and so on.

In comparing different brands and prices, be sure to note the horsepower of the motor used to power the machine. An under - powered saw can sometimes prove more costly in the long run, even though the initial outlay for a small motor will be less than that for a larger one. All manufacturers issue literature in which the recommended motor horsepower is listed for each size machine.

SOUTHERN GARDENER

Long Season For Myrtles

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

The season of the "flower of one hundred days" is here again. In mid-summer and on into the Fall, great masses of pink, red, violet and white crape myrtles dot the southern landscape.

We have planted these showy flowering trees all over our lawns, gardens and streets with never a thought of color scheme. Only the old violet type, planted next to some of the bright reds creates a controversial contrast. It is possible, however, to plan some stunning color combinations with crape myrtles.

The bright pink crape myrtles growing next to the purple - leaf plum will stop you in your tracks. This plum, which blooms very early in the spring, is one of the easiest trees to grow. Even young specimens make a telling mass of violet in the summer. Wherever one of these plums can be planted next to a pink crape myrtle, it is well worth removing something less important.

SLOW GROWING

Not many copper beeches exist in the South, and this gorgeous tree is, of course, very slow growing, but, again even a small specimen is a beautiful thing. From the great size of the famous copper beech that Thomas Jefferson planted at Monticello, one would know not to plant a beech too close to other trees unless they were to be removed when the beech grew up.

A much faster way to create the pink and violet effect is to plant the purple-leaf form of the smoke tree near a pink crape myrtle. In recent years, several American nurseries have been offering the public the best forms of the smoke bush or tree introduced by the English nurseries.

These unbelievably bright violet-foliaged plants have been irresistable to your columnist's camera in gardens and nurseries in England. Their color is something almost entirely lacking in any flowers but the fall asters. Since the color is in the foliage, it is permanent through the full season.

"SMOKE BUSH"

The "smoke bush", as we have always called it in the South, is a non - evergreen very large shrub that was once very popular in our grandmothers' yards. The form grandmother grew had very deep blue - green leaves, purplish when they were young, and was covered with a smoky haze of flowers in summer.

The Notcut Nursery and several others in England have introduced some very striking purple - leaved smoke bushes. As there is some difference in the degree and shade of purple in these new varieties, you may want to grow all of them for contrast with other foliage and flowers in the landscape.

It wasn't too many years ago that aluminum was a material that could be worked only by professionals using special tools. Today, most hardware and building supply stores are stocked with do-it-yourself aluminum that can be bent, cut and drilled with regular hand or power tools.

One of the simplest projects that can be undertaken with this type of aluminum is a portable sun shield, suitable for the beach or backyard. The support can be a simple spike that sticks in the ground or a wooden base that can be placed anywhere. The following materials are needed:

2 ¾" x 8' aluminum tubes
4 ¾" x 90-degree aluminum elbow fittings
1 ¾" aluminum adjustable elbow
1 20' plastic clothes line
20 eye grommets
1 3½" x 2½' canvas (optional if using a wooden base)
1 ¾" aluminum splicer assembly
1 2' x 2' x 1" board
4 aluminum wood screws

INSTRUCTIONS

Saw one tube into two 3-foot lengths and one 2-foot length. Saw the other tube into one 2-foot length and one 6-foot length. The 3-foot and 2-foot lengths form the rectangular shield; the 6-foot length is the stand.

About 15 inches from the top of the stand tube, make a bend of approximately 25 to 30 degrees. Fill the tube with sand before bending to avoid crimping the metal.

Join the four smaller tubes into a 3-foot by 2-foot rectangle with the 90-degree elbow fittings. Lay the rectangle flat, mark the mid-point of one of the 3-foot sides, and at this point drill a ¼" hole tube. Increase the bottom drill hole to ⅝". Insert one end of the adjustable elbow into the ⅝" hole and screw it into place. The other end of the elbow fits into the stand but it's easier if you finish all other steps before making this connection.

HEM CANVAS

Hem the canvas, sewing the grommets at equal intervals around the edge, and lace the canvas onto the shield with the plastic clothesline.

For a wooden base, screw the splicer assembly into the board, using the aluminum wood screws. Fit the tube bottom to the assembly. Now fit the lower end of the adjustable elbow to the stand tube — and your sun shield is ready.

Actually, it's not as complicated as it sounds. This is one case where it's easier done than said.

YOUR PROBLEMS

Worry Can Also Hurry People To Their Grave

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: Our daughter is 35 years old, happily married, with four bright children. She has a beautiful home, and everything to live for.

Both her husband, her father and I are worried to death about her excessive smoking. She has been a heavy smoker since she was a teenager. Although she knew I never approved, she continued to smoke through the years.

Several months ago she was spitting up blood. She quit smoking and went to the doctor. When the X-rays showed no sign of cancer she went back to smoking two packs a day although the doctor advised her against it.

I'm so afraid she will develop cancer that it's making a nervous wreck out of me. She says she has smoked so long now that if she's going to get cancer she will get it. Period. What can I say to this head-strong girl? — Worried Mother

Dear Mother: Probably nothing. Anyone who can read or hear knows by now that there is a definite link between lung cancer and cigarettes. Scientific research continues to churn up more and more damning evidence.

Not everyone who smokes will get lung cancer, obviously, and your daughter may escape it. But worrying has been known to bury people prematurely, so try to get your mind off her smoking and on something else.

Dear Ann Landers: That letter describing the prom committee system which insures all girls a date to the Junior-Senior Prom was the greatest. I'm going to take it up with our student council in September.

I happen to be a girl who never was short of dates, but I know some awfully nice girls who sit home all the time because they don't have sex appeal. Fellows won't even bother to ask them out and get to know how great they really are.

Thanks for printing that one, Ann. It was tops. — Jill

Dear Jill: I'm glad you wrote. Here's another point of view:

Dear Ann Landers: That letter about the prom committee serving as matchmakers was a real roar.

I'd rather sit home until my hair turned white and my teeth fell out than get fixed up by a stupid committee.

Who wants to be chosen out of pity? Not me. — Spirit of St. Louis

Dear Spirit: I'll bet anything you don't do much sittin' home, Toots. It's difficult for a busy girl to imagine what life is like for the ones whose phones never ring.

In the meantime, if it takes a committee to get some of the fellows off their rusty dusties, I say why not?

Confidential to MY RIGHT TO KNOW: Yeah? Who gave you the right? When I form a "Mind Your Own Business Club" I'm going to nominate you for president.

Confidential to SCARED TO DEATH: Tell your mother at once. Do not try the drug your friend recommended. It is extremely dangerous and furthermore it won't work.

To learn how to keep your boy friend in line without losing him, send for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "Necking and Petting — And How Far To Go," enclosing with your request 20c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of Monroe Morning World, enclosing a stamped self - addressed envelope.

Look For In Fall Fashions

. . .the fascination with bindings and edgings in satin on wool, in leather on tweeds, in contrasts of plaid with solid wool.

. . .the status leather of fall, reptile, in shoes and bags, to be worn with tweed suits, to be worn as a suit by the moneyed few.

. . .shifts with shirt-sleeves and a slightly Japanese look from their obi sashes tied right under the bosom, worn with bold hats.

Why Grow Old

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

I believe that many more women would enjoy riding if they did not feel self-conscious about it. Really it's out of date to feel that way! In many countries, people of all ages ride, often using cycling as a mode of transportation. Today, women indulge in sports at every age. They do not do as they used to, and act like others expect them to act at every age. They do what they want to do and are able to do without giving a thought to birthdays.

This form of emancipation added more happiness to the lives of women than the right to vote. They must have sat around crocheting lots of times when they would have preferred a good game of tennis or golf. They were expected to act in a stiffly dignified way from early youth on. They were doomed by group thinking to settle down into preconceived grooves or ruts at every stage in their lives.

Going back to bicycling, don't be timid about it. I just recently had a letter saying: "My figure is as trim as when I was a young girl. There are no fatty deposits. I attribute this to my bicycle riding. Let all the gals take heed and bring out their children's cycles to ride. That's how I got started, with my son's first full-sized bicycle.

"I am 47 years old and ride about one thousand miles a year. I started riding 12 years ago when there weren't many women riding. People used to stare at me but they don't any more."

Here is another note which reflects the fact that women are still a little self-conscious about riding when they become a bit older. This letter says:

"Dear Mrs. Lowman:

"Thank you for your article about bicycling. I am 61 years old and ride. I was a little afraid people would talk about a woman my age riding a bicycle. So again thank you."

All I can say is, if they talk let them talk! Go ahead and enjoy yourself. Anyway, with the emphasis being placed on the importance of exercise, and examples such as the distinguished Dr. Paul Dudley White setting the pace, bicycling has become downright stylish.

If you would like to have my free hip slimming exercise which include one called, The Bicycle Ride, send a stamped, self-addressed envelop with your request for leaflet No. 3. Address Josephine Lowman in care of Monroe Morning World.

Hair Straightening Aids Girls With Unruly Curls

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Wrtier

Hair straightening for curly-haired girls carries no more risk than having a permanent wave, says hairdresser Michel Kazan, "but many girls hesitate to take advantage of it."

"Humidity makes curly hair unruly, from frizzy to overcurly, particularly bad if a curly haired girl takes an ocean voyage or vacations near the sea," he points out. "But if hair straightening is properly done by a trained operator, it will be easy to manage."

The entire curl is not removed in the process, he says, just about 85 per cent of it. The 15 per cent of curl left can form the body for a perfect coiffure, he says.

ACCEPTED IN EUROPE

"A hair straightener treatment lasts about three months, so it can go through a vacation period and into the early days of fall when many girls still go hatless and need it. Women who have fine hair do not hesitate to get a permanent to supply body to their hair, so those who have too much hair should have confidence in the reverse method of achieving proper hair body," he says.

Women Can Choose Own Fashion Type

Every designer is getting a little bit desperate over the bland, basic-basic look of current fashion. President Larry Aldrich of the New York Couture Group has bluntly said that fashion hasn't really changed since about 1958.

So the designers have been throwing various dramatic versions of the basics at us for fall. At one end a woman can choose to be as rich as possible, in Bob Bugnand's $50,000 evening dress casually roped with a tasseled diamond belt and finished with diamond cuff links. At the other, she can have Rudi Gernreich's "poor" look in a kabuki dress with kimono sleeves and a waistline right under the bosom.

Of course, wearing basic sportswear just won't do for fall. It has to be dramatic sportswear, with knee-high boots, shillelagh and a Sherlock Holmes hat. Designers are working on the theory that if they can't lick the sportswear thing they'll outdo it.

The same idea pervades the ladylike collections. Women who want "nice" clothes will have to be elegant with a vengeance or be out of the fashion picture. For ladylike now means svelt of figure, so one can wear those unbelted sinuous dresses and sleek suits in plum and gray with all the fur collars and hemlines.

Shoppers Seek Fewer Labels

Labels, as everyone knows, are meant to inform. But they're becoming a nuisance these days, defeating their own purpose. The annoyed customer, cutting and ripping off up to six labels from a single garment, is likely to read none of them.

There's the designer label, the fabric manufacturer's label, the tags that tell the fabric composition, the size, the store, the method of care, the union. Many of them are required by law, others are necessary to someone along the line from maker to final customer, others result from modern blend fabrics.

But the way they're put on, ranging from what seems like rivets to tangled strings, defeats the customers reading them. What seems needed is some method to get everything necessary on a single label that will give the customer what she needs to know and no more. Or perhaps stores could supply a label removal service for use after purchase.

HOUSE OF THE WEEK

Modest Split-Level Demand Of Homeowner

FARMHOUSE MOTIF: An appealing early American theme, accented by a covered portico with arched colonnades, provides a tasteful exterior for this handsome split-level. The house contains three or four bedrooms in overall dimensions of 67'5" wide by 33'8" deep.

Every home, in some measure, is a reflection of the person who designed it. So don't be surprised if you recognize something of your own personality in today's House of the Week.

Architect Herman H. York decided to combine in this design the characteristic features of his six most popular house plans. The result, he trusts, is a blend of his talent and your taste.

The design, J-87 in the weekly series, offers the desirable aspects of both a split-level and a two-story. It has three bedrooms, four if necessary, and its dimensions are a modest 67'5" wide by 33'8" deep. The width can be reduced nine feet (to 58'5") by substituting a single-car garage.

"Homeowners seem to like the dramatic effects of multi-level living," York said, "but at the same temihueso nm same time housewives don't like to be chasing up and down half flights of stairs all day long. In this respect, they prefer a two-story."

In today's plan York provides a slight three-step separation of the living room, dining room and kitchen from the rest of the downstairs — foyer, family room, den (or fourth bedroom) and laundry. The upstairs is eight steps above the raised portion.

The exterior carries out an early American farmhouse theme with brick and wood shingle side walls and asphalt shingle roofing. An arched colonade softens the front elevation; its gentle curves relieving the rectangular lines of the rest of the facade. The bow window in the living room has the same effect.

The house is well within the medium category in over-all area. Its lower levels contain only 1,267 square feet of living area not counting the 460-square-foot garage and 88-square-foot portico. The bedroom level contains 687 square feet. The basement is located beneath the living room, dining room and kitchen.

ADDITIONAL DETAILS

The entrance to this house is fetching, both inside and out, and bound to create a good first impression.

The double front door beneath the covered portico opens to a large foyer whose floor planter and iron stair railing attract immediate attention. The foyer has a slate floor — striking to look at and easy to maintain.

There are two closets in the foyer. The second also is handy to the family room, ideal for storing bridge tables, folding chairs and the like. The den, adjoining the family room and foyer, also has a large storage closet.

A beam ceiling, fireplace, wood storage box and book shelves give the family room the sort of farmhouse charm anticipated by the exterior of the house. Architect York suggests a wood grained material for the walls, but if the budget would permit brick could be used for the entire fireplace wall; and it also is possible to steal some space from the garage workshop area for a built-in TV or hi-fi in the family room.

The living and dining rooms are set apart in a formal wing, with the large kitchen separating them from the informal area. A fireplace, shown as an optional feature, would greatly enhance the living room and simplify furniture arrangement.

The most interesting feature upstairs is the bathroom ensemble. One economical unit is split three ways so that the master bedroom has an adjoining bath which shares a tub with the family bathroom. It's possible for three persons to use the bathroom as the same time, each with absolute privacy.

All three bedrooms are nicely proportioned and each has ample closet space. The upstairs hall also is large enough for the vacuum cleaner, clothes basket and other paraphernalia which collects there at housecleaning time, with elbow room to spare.

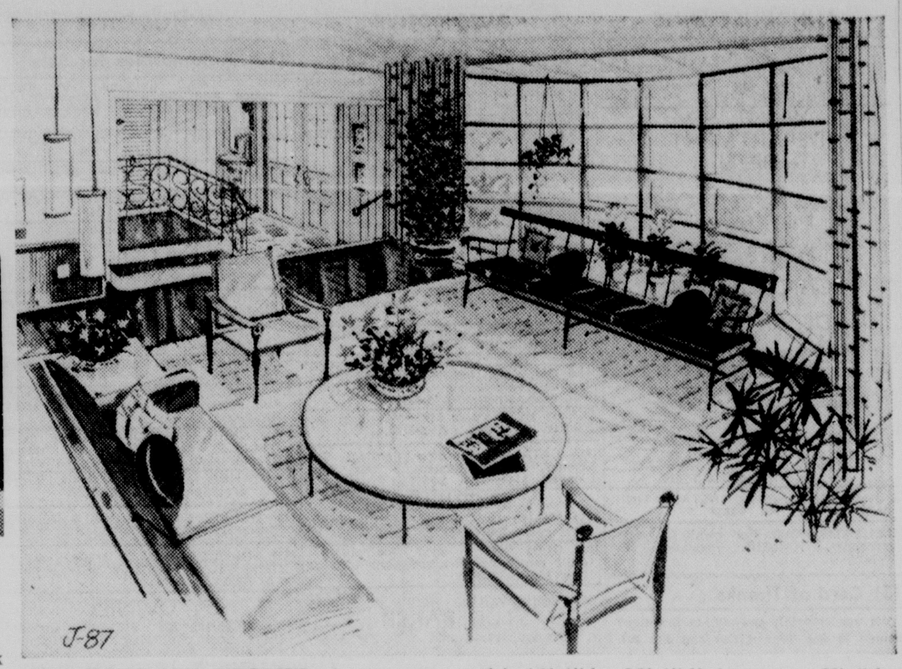

Architect York suggests a simple monochromatic color scheme for the exterior—red brick, white trim and wood shingles of either natural cedar or painted white. If the side walls are white, York recommends black roof shingles; if the side walls are natural the roof should be white or light gray.

Some might want an accent color on the front door. "But if it were my house," said York, "I'd make the door white too."

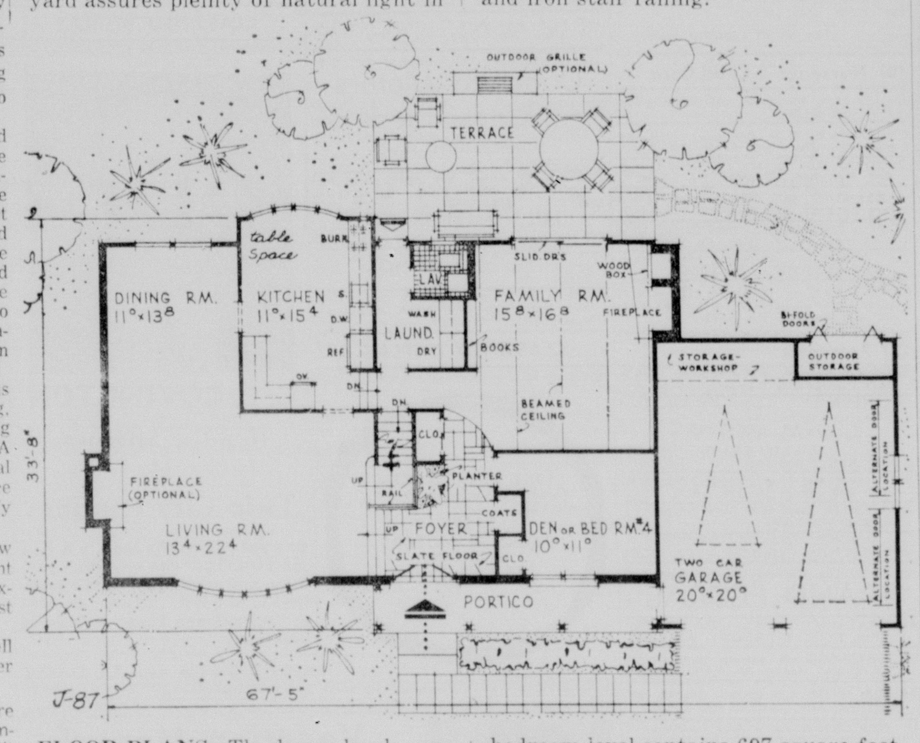

J-87 STATISTICS

A three or four bedroom split level containing 1,267 square feet of living area on the two lower levels not counting the 460-square - foot garage and 88-square - foot portico. Bedroom level contains 687 square feet. Basement is located beneath the living room, dining room and kitchen. Over-all dimensions are 67'5" wide by 33'8" deep. Alternate single car garage would reduce width nine feet, to 58'5".

FLOOR PLANS: The lower levels contain 1,267 square feet of living area not counting the garage and portico. The bedroom level contains 697 square feet. The basement is located beneath the living room, dining room an kitchen.

Tech Graduates In Engineering Attend Banquet

RUSTON (Special) — Louisiana Tech's Engineering Foundation, headed by T. C. Beasley of Ruston, honored the summer graduating seniors and candidates for masters' degrees in the School of Engineering with a banquet in the Student Center here, with a highlight of the event being the presentation of a $100 check by the foundation to Edwin M. Leachman of Minden.

The recipient of the award will receive a master of science degree in chemical engineering from Tech at commencement exercises Thursday night, Aug. 8 Leachman has accepted a research fellowship from Clemson College, where he will work on a Ph.D. degree in chemical engineering. He is the son of Rev. and the late Mrs. Thomas W. Leachman of Minden.

Dr. F. Jay Taylor, Tech president, discussed Tech and its School of Engineering at the dinner. Another speaker was Ben T. Bogard, dean of the engineering school here, who spoke on the industrial growth of the Gulf-South region and of the need for paraleling that development with higher level technical education.

Col. Jeff Kidd of Ruston, executive secretary of the engineering foundation, described the mission, activities and aims of the organization and distributed packets of information regarding the foundation.

Background music for the occasion was played by Hopkins Hallman of Farmerville, a Tech student pianist. Special entertainment as provided by the Three Knights, including James Pelton of Shreveport, Everett Plummer of Jonesboro and Michael Waddey of Sarepta, all Tech students.

Among the guests at the dinner was M. C. Bubenzer of Shreveport, immediate past president of the foundation. Present also were members of the faculty and staff of the School of Engineering.

Dr. Virgil Orr, head of engineering research at Tech, is chairman of the advisory committee of the foundation.

Students living outside the city limits may attend Neville High School as well as those living in the city.

Parents or students who have questions about schedules, credits, or other school problems should take advantage of the registration time to talk with school officials, the principal advised.

The principal's office will remain open during August from 8 a.m. to noon, and from 1 p.m. until 3 p.m. Monday through Friday.

WANT-AD WONDERS Trade Mark

Want Ad Makes Thomas D. Hathaway PTA Vice President

Tired of watching his conscientious, hardworking wife become more and more involved with jobs in church and community organizations, Hathaway in sheer desperation ran the following ad in the local paper:

Attention, all organizations: If you have not completed your volunteer staff, please do not contact June Hathaway as she has a full schedule. Your thoughtfulness will be appreciated. Thomas D. Hathaway.

Tom is now vice president of the PTA. They intended to ask his wife, but after reading the ad they asked Tom.

ALMOST BY ACCIDENT STEVE LEARNS THAT A LIFE RAFT IS MISSING FROM THE MOTEL POOL

COL. CANYON, THE U.S. COAST GUARD PUT OUT A BLANKET QUERY OF ALL AIRCRAFT AND SHIPS...

A FREIGHTER REPORTED SIGHTING WHAT APPEARED TO BE AN EMPTY, ONE-MAN, PNEUMATIC TYPE RAFT, GIVING POSITION AND TIME!

WE'LL ASSUME LEIGHTON OLSON WAS ABOARD! CAN YOU GET ME WIND, WEATHER AND DRIFT DATA ?

WEATHER MAKING UP, SIR

SOMEONE AT THE DOOR

I'LL GET IT, SUMMER

I'M SAM BOULEVARD! I HEARD ON THE RADIO ABOUT THE OLSON BOY...

I FEEL I SHOULD OFFER TO HELP IN SOME WAY — SINCE I WAS THE ONE WHO SENT THE PAPER OUT OF THE WAR GAMES ROOM!

THE BOY'S FATHER IS IN A NURSING HOME... HIS MOTHER IS RESTING

BUT SHE WILL BE GRATEFUL TO KNOW YOU ARE HERE...

CAN I POUR YOU SOMETHING WHILE WE ARE SWEATING THIS OUT?

IN ANOTHER MOTEL ROOM, MISS COPPER CALHOON SITS AND BROODS FOR A LONG TIME — THEN SHE DIALS A NUMBER

BUT THERE IS NO ANSWER — BECAUSE SAM BOULEVARD IS SITTING WITH STEVE AND SUMMER — WHO HAS QUIT HER JOB WITH THE LADY TYCOON... SO COPPER WALKS OUT INTO THE NIGHT... AND NOT ONE PERSON CARES — EVEN IF SHE WERE TO WALK STRAIGHT INTO THE POTOMAC...

HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS

DEAR FOLKS:

So many of you have asked how to prevent mildew on leather book binding, etc. . . .

Here is one from my chemistry book:

Go to your drugstore and buy a few ounces of five per cent copper sulfate (not more than 5%). This is very inexpensive.

Immerse a soft cloth or a

When thoroughly dry, this cloth can be used to rub leather-bound books, etc. One cloth will take care of scores of books. This will not mark or mar the leather.

Copper sulfate is poisonous and should be kept out of the reach of children. Read caution labels on all bottles.

Heloise

DINNER FOR ONE

DEAR HELOISE:

For those who live alone and like to use pressure cookers to speed up cooking time . . . did you know they could be used to cook several vegetables at one time, by forming little cups of foil to hold each vegetable?

Little frozen food pie tins can be used if they are slightly bent to form an oval shape. If need be (according to the type of vegetable you are cooking) one can punch a few holes in the bottom of the pie tin.

Gerald O'Connor

FRENCH WAFFLES

DEAR HELOISE:

Whenever I made waffles . . . I used to throw the first one out because it stuck to the griddle. No more . . . I have learned to lift it out easily now with an icepick. IT WORKS. I don't know why.

I also used to hate to make French toast, as it took so long to fry. Now I use my waffle iron for French toast. It is delicious, pretty and quicker.

Ruth

LEMON AID

DEAR HELOISE:

I use lemon oil furniture polish on the inside of my glass shower doors to remove water spots. Apply with a soft rag and rub it. It's wonderful.

Mrs. W. W.

DEAR HELOISE:

I have beautiful coffee tables and end tables, but I cannot keep people from setting damp glasses on them . . . which always leave a ring. My husband refuses to let me cover these tables with glass, saying, 'it looks too much like a hotel."

Dolly Madison

Dear Dolly:

I bought some little trivets at my dime store and on each end table and my coffee table is where they stay. They do not look bad at all. I bought brass, as my furniture is all Oriental.

Those who have other styles of furniture can use cast iron and so forth to match their own decor. This not only looks nice but prevents "rings" from cold drinks and heat marks from hot drinks.

For those of you who find that neither brass nor the black cast iron will do, did you know that the cast-iron trivets can be sprayed with any color paint to match your furniture?

Heloise

PAINTING TODAY?

DEAR HELOISE:

When I open a can of paint which contains lumps, scum and so forth . . . I cut a piece of wire screen just the size of the can. I put this piece of screen on top of the paint and let it fall down to the bottom of the can. Any lumps present will be carried to the bottom of the can and kept there.

This is especially good for home owners who just need to paint that 'little something' around the house.

Louie

THOSE FLOUR SACKS!

DEAR HELOISE:

For those who use flour and sugar directly out of the sack, it is so much easier if, after the contents are partly used, tops of the bags are cut off a bit with a pair of scissors!

This way the contents stay close to the top of the bag. It also prevents spilling when using measuring cups and saves many floury arms.

Mrs. G.

ON THE CUFF

DEAR HELOISE:

When you working girls are in a rush and just cannot find your cuff links for the French-cuffed shirt you seldom wear . . . just grab a pair of your clip-on earrings.

I did this in desperation last week and it became the topic of conversation in our office. Now all the girls are doing it.

Josephine

DEAR HELOISE:

Instead of mixing starch each washday I make a double batch of it.

When the starch cools I pour it in milk cartons and put it in my freezer. (Understand, I make an extra-heavy solution.)

The following week I remove the carton (the night before I do the laundry) and set it upright in a pan to melt. By adding a little warm water to the melted starch the next day, I have saved myself the trouble of making up a new batch of starch.

Mrs. Gunther

POLISH FOR PINS

DEAR HELOISE:

For women who live in trailer parks or share a clothesline with other neighbors . . . here is a way to identify your own clothespins.

I painted all my wooden clothespins with red fingernail polish. It's exactly the shade I have on my own hands!

Lou

WASHING BLANKETS

DEAR HELOISE:

When I washed my woolen blankets I always covered the clothesline with a plastic bag before hanging a blanket over it! It never came out with a crease or mark on my blankets.

After trying this for three months I have found an even better solution. Take bath towels or a sheet, fold it several times and put it over the line. It will absorb the moisture faster and will never leave a line on the blanket you wash!

Louise Barron

This feature is written for you . . . the housewife and homemaker. If you have a hint, problem or suggestion you'd like to share . . . write to Heloise today in care of this newspaper. 8-4
